Atom Policy Commission Is Proposed By Scientists

Federation Urges Truman to Set Up Public Group for Study of All Issues

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

New York, Feb. 5. — The Federation of American Scientists, comprised of many of the younger atomic experts who made the A-bomb, urged President Truman today to set up another "Acheson-Lilienthal" public commission to study issues raised by the hydrogen bomb.

Dr. Hugh C. Wolfe, chairman of the FAS, declared that the H-bomb "involves the American people too much to be left in the hands of any small group to make any secret decisions."

Therefore, his organization said, a commission of several of the Nation's most thoughtful and respected public figures, in and out of the Government, should be established "to examine the whole issue of our atomic policy and to make a fresh start."

More Public Data Sought

The FAS proposal is almost identical with that suggested editorially by The Washington Post last week.

Wolfe, who explained the proposal with several of his colleagues at a press conference here, declared that one of the first tasks of such a commission would be to make considerably more facts about the hydrogen bomb available to the public. He referred specifically to information about its implications on defense, military and foreign policy, rather than technical or scientific data.

"The Government has been held 'way back, and has moved far too slowly," he said, "in releasing information of importance to the framing of national policy, and which could be released without in any way jeopardizing national security."

Would Use Wide Information

The proposed new commission, the FAS suggested, would operate like the famous Acheson-Lilienthal committees in early 1946, which framed the initial recommendations for international atomic control.

It should, however, seek solutions to the problems raised by the H-bomb by examining and reporting on subjects "within a much broader framework" than the mere question of atomic weapons, the FAS declared.

It should be given all secret information, not merely on the A- and H-bombs, the scientists said, but also on military affairs and in-

U. S. Joint Chiefs Fly to Okinawa After Tokyo Talks

Tokyo (Monday), Feb. 6 (AP)—The U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff today left for Okinawa on a tour that may result in a stronger American military attitude towards Communist Asia.

Secret conversations among the four top commanders and General MacArthur and his chief planners left a prevalent impression in Tokyo that a tougher military attitude may be backed by increased attention to military needs in this area and by a program of "digging in."

$50,000 Three-Alarm Fire Sweeps Plant; Blaze Misses Huge Store of Cleaning Fluid

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

Clouds of heavy smoke rise from three-alarm fire at dry-cleaning firm's plant

A fierce, three-alarm fire struck the main plant of the Aristo Dry Cleaning Co., 1226 South Capitol st., shortly after 5 p. m. yesterday, causing at least $50,000 damage.

Firemen brought the fire under control in less than an hour—before it could reach 4000 gallons of inflammable dry-cleaning fluid in basement tanks of the half-million-dollar building.

Clouds of smoke covered the Southwest and Southeast sections as the blaze spread quickly. It was discovered about 5:20 p. m. and nine minutes later a third alarm was sounded.

Hundreds watched the blaze. Traffic was snarled, then closed on the new S. Capitol st. bridge nearby for more than an hour.

Leroy Leibel, co-owner, said clothing picked up at the firm's 60 stores Saturday for cleaning at the plant was not touched.

Seventy percent of the plant,

U. S. May Seek To Bring Fuchs Here for Trial

Doubt Cast on Success In Extraditing Briton In Bomb Secrets Case

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Possibilities of seeking extradition from England of Dr. Klaus Fuchs are under consideration by the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) said yesterday.

The British scientist was jailed in London last Friday on charges that he passed vital atomic secrets to Soviet agents while employed on wartime research in the United States.

While conceding that the question of extradition was being explored, McMahon said preliminary reports from a committee lawyer cast doubt on possible success of such a move.

"Fuchs is a British subject," McMahon said, "and the British judicial processes seem to be working, and the British authorities seem to be on the alert.

"It is true that the matter of Fuchs' violation of our laws has been discussed in the Joint Committee. At my request, inquiries into the legal problems involved in his possible extradition have been made.

"I am informed by counsel for the committee that doubt exists in his mind as to whether or not the applicable extradition treaty between the United States and Great Britain would apply."

The current extradition treaty, executed in 1931, does not contemplate extradition if the subject has been "tried, discharged or punished, or is still under trial." Fuchs, held without bail for court action this week, is "still under trial."

Nevertheless, there were Senators on the committee and off who backed the extradition idea yes-

Tito Raises Risk

Russia Cuts Albanian Aid, Study Shows

London, Feb. 5 (U.P.)—Russia appears to have abandoned plans to use Albania—smallest of her satellites—as an operational base in the Balkans, experts on Balkan affairs said today.

Albania's isolation from Soviet controlled areas through the rebellion of Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito has practically wiped out her value as a Soviet outpost in Europe, the sources said.

A survey of the Royal Institute of International Affairs shows that Soviet aid to Albania has declined considerably since Tito's break with the Cominform.

The survey stated that during the past several months the number of ships arriving at Albanian ports has fallen off drastically, leaving both the Albanan people and government wondering anxiously about their future economic position.

Since Tito's revolt isolated Albania from direct contact with other satellite territory, supplies have had to be shipped to the Albanian ports of Valona and Duraz-

Luckman Reported Offered AEC Chairmanship

By the United Press

President Truman has offered the chairmanship of the Atomic Energy Commission to 40-year-old Charles Luckman, who recently quit as $300,000-a-year president of Lever Brothers Co., it was reported yesterday.

Asked to confirm it, Luckman told the United Press:

"You would have to ask the President to get a direct answer. I will not deny or confirm the report."

The White House refused to comment.

The $17,500-a-year post becomes vacant February 15 when David E. Lilienthal retires to private life after three years at the helm of the vital four-billion-dollar A-bomb program.

Allies Warned Of Red Plans To Grab Berlin

Violent Coup Plotted For May 'Youth Rally,' Informants Report

Berlin, Feb. 5 (U.P.)—Intelligence officers of the Western allies have received detailed reports that Soviet Communists plan to seize control of western Berlin by violence May 28, it was made known tonight.

The coup would be attempted in connection with a gigantic "German youth rally" set for May 28.

A high German source said Western authorities and German officials were conferring on means to meet the threat.

An Allied informant said reports that a coup would be attempted had been seeping into intelligence headquarters for a month.

The Allied intelligence reports say the Communists plan to tie up West Berlin transport, overpower the 11,000-man police force of the western part of the city, and take control of the city government.

Dr. Kurt Schumacher, German Socialist leader, first disclosed reports of the plot in a press conference at his headquarters in Bonn, the West German capital, today.

Schumacher said 600,000 Soviet Zone Communists had been ordered to "conquer" Berlin May 28 and that only Allied forces backed by tanks could keep West Berlin from falling

GOP Supper Watched for Battle Cry

Fellow Governors Back Duff's Call For Liberal and Fighting Statement

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

Republican Governors appear to have banded together in a last-minute drive to persuade party leaders to produce a liberal and fighting statement of Republican principles at the organization's National Committee meeting today.

Polls of the 19 Republican Governors showed that they almost unanimously are behind the demand made last week by Governor James H. Duff, of Pennsylvania, for a progressive, hard-hitting party platform statement. Five Governors joined Governor Duff at the time he outlined the proposal in a letter to the Republican National Committee.

Of the remaining 13 all but two, who could not be reached, expressed approval of the demand. Their attitudes recalled the Republican policy meeting at Mackinac Island, Mich., in 1943 when the Governors banded together to force the party's leaders to draft a forward-looking statement of aims.

The stand of Republican Governors became known as the National Committee met yesterday behind closed doors to plan its campaign to win control of Congress in the important November elections. The entire membership of the House of Representatives is at stake as are the seats of 32 Senators.

To State Aims at Supper

The party-planning session ends tonight with announcement of a new statement of Republican aims and a $1 box supper at Uline Arena here in lieu of the more formal Lincoln Day dinners of past years. National Committee members are studying policy proposals drafted by Senate and House Republican leaders.

As for the Republican Governors, the Sunday Bulletin of Philadelphia reported it had reached nine who indorsed the demand of Governor Duff. The paper quoted Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, 1948, presidential candidate, as advising party members to "stop bellyaching."

"If as a party we try to go back to the Nineteenth Century, or even to the 1920s, you can bury the Republican Party as the deadest pigeon in the country," Governor Dewey told the paper. He called for "vigorous protection of the rights of labor" and asserted that only a forward looking Republican Party would win.

Not included in the newspaper poll, Gov. Arthur B. Langlie, of Washington, told the Republican Party to "take quite a forward and positive stand on the vital issues and problems which confront us at this midcentury mark."

Governor Langlie asserted that the Taft-Hartley labor law "needs modification to make it a truly fair and workable act." He called on the Republicans to "firmly defend" freedom for the individual working man" and asserted that "no deal is a fair deal unless it is

Printers on D. C. Newspapers Seek Sanction for Strike Vote

Washington newspaper printers yesterday voted, 300 to 18, to ask for authorization to take a strike vote against the city's four newspaper publishers.

Negotiations between the members of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101 and the publishers, over wage scales, hours, overtime pay, vacations and other working conditions, have reached a stalemate, President James J. O'Connor of the union said.

O'Connor declared the vote yesterday was no bargaining move.

When and if authority to strike is obtained from the international union as a result of the vote, it will be followed up by a strike meeting of the local "at the earliest possible time," he said.

The vote to ask for authority to walk out followed two negotiating sessions with representatives of the four newspaper publishers, in which the printers were offered the same wages and working conditions they have now and a new graduated vacation scale, according to O'Connor.

The publishers had originally asked for a $4-a-week reduction in wages, while the union had countered with a request for increases of $9 a week for two shifts and $14 for the night shift.

Peyton R. Evans, executive secretary of the Washington Publishers Association, said last night the proposals discussed last week did not constitute a straight offer, and released the contents of a letter written by him to O'Connor on Saturday to clarify the employers' position.

The letter read, in part:

"Throughout these negotiations, the publishers have contended, and, they believe, with complete justification in the light of existing economic conditions, that a reduction in their operating costs should

Smoot Gravel Strike Ends After 5 Months

No Wage Increase Included in Pact With 160 Employes

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The Washington construction industry's longest strike—and one of the longest in any industry here—ended yesterday as some 160 union employes agreed to a new work contract with the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corp.

The walkout, estimated to have cost concrete contractors here about $400,000 for hauling sand and gravel from outside suppliers, began on August 29, 1949. The company will resume operations today.

Much of the credit for final settlement of the long-drawn-out dispute was given to James A. Holden, conciliator of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, who worked on the dispute during most of the 23-week walkout.

The major issue in the dispute was resolved by agreement on a 3 percent noncontributory health, welfare and insurance fund for the benefit of the employes,

6 Reported Killed And 7 Injured In 2 Hotel Fires

Eureka, Mont., Feb. 5 (U.P.)—Five persons were reported killed and three injured today when an explosion and fire destroyed a three-story frame hotel, an adjoining apartment house and the town's postoffice.

Believed killed when flames consumed the hotel were John Powell and Delano Grayson, both basketball players on the Browning High School team which played here last night; Charles Cameron, about 60, Eureka farmer; William Peterson, Great Northern Railroad employe, and Ed La France, night clerk at the hotel.

Detroit, Feb. 5 (AP).—One woman, 28-year-old Mrs. Lois Braxton, was killed and four persons were injured in a fire that swept the Touraine Hotel early today.

Firemen reached the hotel as many of the 125 panicked residents leaped from windows of the three-story building. Firemen said property damage was not large.

Phone Truce Of Two Weeks May Be Asked

Ching Is Expected To Propose It Today; Union Likely to Accept

The Government will urge the American Communications Workers (CIO) to agree to a two-week truce to head off the Nation-wide telephone strike set to start Wednesday morning, a high Federal official said yesterday.

He said Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching, who is directing Government efforts to prevent the walkout, may make a formal proposal to union President Joseph A. Beirne today.

Union officials refused to say what their answer would be until they have examined the terms but it was believed they would agree. That automatically would postpone the strike, set for 6 a. m. Wednesday on a time zone basis.

Ching was in New York yesterday for talks with representatives of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., parent company of the various Bell Telephone subsidiaries involved in the contract dispute. They have rejected union demands for "substantially" higher pay, a shorter work week, and other contract improvements.

Beirne, who has accused the companies of bargaining in bad faith, said Saturday a strike seems "inevitable."

He has ordered 100,000 telephone workers, mostly installers, repairmen and salesmen, to leave their jobs. Another 220,000 union members—not legally eligible to strike—would make the walkout complete by refusing to cross picket lines.

Ching, who has called the strike threat "most serious," last week ordered his mediators in the field to step up their efforts to get the union and local Bell companies into "real" bargaining.

Ewing Urges Student Loans

New York, Feb. 5 (NYHT).—Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, strongly advocated Federal aid to higher education that would include "a system of student loans guaranteed by the Government."

Declaring that the United States is "rapidly approaching a crisis in higher education which is almost as important as our present chronic crisis in primary and secondary education," Ewing said that because of rising costs inconsistent with college incomes, many of these schools "will soon be on the edge of bankruptcy."

In his first New York public appearance since his return from a survey of social services abroad made as President Truman's personal emissary, Ewing was the principal speaker at the tenth annual conference of the workmen's circle division of the Jewish Labor Committee at the Hotel Astor.

Majority Of 400,000 May Be Idle By Nightfall

Truman Is Ready To Invoke Law; Soft Coal Pile Down to 15 Days

By The Associated Press

President Truman's warning that he would invoke the Taft-Hartley law in an effort to halt the coal strike apparently had little effect on the Nation's miners today.

Early reports from soft coal areas indicated that the 100,000 miners who have been observing a "no contract, no work" policy, were staying away from the pits and that others would follow them.

It seemed possible that by nightfall a majority of 400,000 members of the United Mine Workers Union headed by John L. Lewis would not be at work.

With the Nation's coal piles down to a 15 days' supply in midwinter, Mr. Truman was ready to use the Taft-Hartley law.

Reports from West Virginia and Pennsylvania indicated that the coal miners were not likely to resume work despite early White House action in the situation.

Lewis has hinted broadly that a slowdown will go into effect if the Taft-Hartley law forces the miners back to work.

Under the act's procedure for halting a strike while contract terms are ironed out, a board of inquiry into the facts first is set up by the President. Ordinarily it reports in a week or 10 days. Then the Attorney General can ask the Federal Court for an 80-day injunction against the strike.

But White House officials said Mr. Truman will urge the board to report in five to seven days if possible. This would hurry the law's machinery by a few days, which might prove precious in event of an all-out strike.

It also demonstrated the state of deep concern gripping the White House in the face of failure of Mr. Truman's proposal for 70 days of normal work while an independent fact board tried to break the contract deadlock. This board would have made recommendations to both sides for settlement.

The operators agreed to the plan, but Lewis scorned it. He said Saturday such a board could not understand the miners' problems. And if the union rejected its findings the Taft-Hartley Act would be invoked, he contended.

Mr. Truman has consistently refused to use the drastic law in spite of strong Republican demands in Congress.

But last week saw scattered

Princeton Teacher Shot Dead in Third Pull at 'Roulette'

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 5 (AP).—A 25-year-old Princeton professor put a pistol to his head and killed himself last night in what authorities listed as a game of Russian roulette.

Dr. Bunkley

Police said friends of Dr. Allison Williams Bunkley told of watching him pull the trigger twice but that nothing happened. He refused to quit, they said, and laughingly announced h'ed "do it just once more."

That attempt sent a .32 caliber bullet into his right temple. He died at Princeton Hospital.

Dr. Bunkley was the son of a retired rear admiral, Joel W. Bunkley of New York City. He was an expert on the Argentine, and had published the "Argentine Newsletter" based on information that he had said was obtained from underground sources opposed to the Peron administration.

(Bunkley's uncle, Allison R. Williams, 4801 Connecticut ave. nw., said funeral services will be held Wednesday in Zazoo City, Miss.)

Anderson Set for Fight

Cotton Bill May Set Off Row Brewing in Senate Committee

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A split in the Senate Agriculture Committee, bringing to the open long-simmering differences, may develop when a House-approved bill to increase cotton acreages reaches it this week.

This was indicated Friday when former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. M.) criticized the House proposal on the Senate floor. He was promised assistance in opposing it by a long-time foe of present farm measures, Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.).

Anderson will be opposed in the committee by Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.). Republican Senator Milton R. Young (N. D.), a supporter of high supports for wheat farmers, and perhaps others, may join Thomas.

Anderson was one of the authors of the original cotton and peanut acreage-restriction law passed last year. When its provisions were announced by the Agriculture Department, a storm of protest swept into Congress from Southern States. Thousands of cotton raisers, according to House members, charged rank discrimination. Texas leaders threatened legal action against Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. House cotton State members hurried to Washington early in December to prepare the bill passed last week.

The original measure, as put into effect by Brannan, would cut cotton acreage from about 27 to 28 million acres to an estimated 21 million. The House resolution would, for one year, permit an increase in this figure from one to two million acres.

Anderson attacked the House proposal in a speech in which he denied the Agriculture Act of 1949, which he helped write, was in any way responsible for the present wasteful surplus of potatoes.

He urged that ways to hold down potato production be found. At the same time, he urged that no relaxation in cotton acreages, such as the House measure would provide, be permitted.

He declared opposition to any effort to increase acreage allotments, even for one year, for wheat or other crops. The House Agriculture Committee is preparing a bill, sponsored by Representative Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.), former chairman, to give wheat

Trapped With Last Hostage

Gunman, Girl Kidnap 2 Men, Steal 3 Cars in 5-Hour Chase

Golden, Colo., Feb. 5 (AP).—An arsenal-toting gunman and his woman companion were captured by officers on an icy mountain road early today, after a five-hour chase during which they kidnaped two men and stole three cars.

Jefferson County Sheriff Carl Enlow said the gunman identified himself as Andrew McCauley, Wahkeeny Fark, just west of Denver. The woman, he said, told him she was Jean Carroll, 28, of Houston, Tex.

McCauley told authorities he was wanted for passing $250,000 worth of bad checks in 12 States.

Miss Carroll said she knew nothing of McCauley's record. She said she met him in Houston and came here with him to marry him.

The pair gave up without a struggle when they were trapped with their last hostage by five police cars at the Lookout Mountain junction of U. S. 40—about 20 miles west of Denver.

They carried one .32 caliber carbine rifle, one .30 caliber carbine Army rifle, two seven-millimeter Lugers set up as submachine guns with drum magazines, and one .38 special automatic. All were fully loaded.

They were booked for investigation at the county jail.

Anti-Racket Statute Support Expected by Justice Dept.

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Justice Department expects next week's national crime conference to produce specific recommendations for anti-racketeering laws which can be passed by Congress at this session.

This was revealed last night by a top official of the Justice Department who asked, however, that his name not be used.

The one-day conference, scheduled February 15, will consider the problem of the tygoons who control the interstate syndicates in slot machines, off-track bookmaking and the numbers racket. Subcommittees to be named will be expected to bring in recommendations in a few weeks.

"We certainly want the recommendations for legislation in time to submit to Congress for action at this session," the Justice official said.

This official also said the two proposed congressional hearings on the tygoon problems — the Kefauver resolution for a full-scale Senate crime probe and the Preston bill in the House to ban interstate shipment of slot machines — would key in with the general purpose of the national conference.

Hence, he made it clear, any congressional hearings on those

Tydings Says Bomb Should Hasten Curbs

Controls Urged

Bomb Order Unavoidable, Senators Say

By The Associated Press

Four United States Senators—including Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee—agreed emphatically in a radio broadcast last night that President Truman had no alternative but to order construction of the H-bomb.

But at the same time they were equally emphatic that some plan must be developed for international control in the atomic arms race.

Besides Senator McMahon, the participants in a "Meet Your Congress" broadcast over WINX at 6:30 p. m. were Senators John W. Bricker (R., Ohio), John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) and Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.). The program was transcribed Thursday—the day before the disclosure that British Physicist Klaus Fuchs had handed the Russians data on the A-bomb and H-bomb.

Senator Bricker, however, urged without this knowledge that America disregard Russian activities in development of the hydrogen bomb.

"Isn't it more imperative," Bricker asked, "that we proceed without regard to the Russians? It seems we weaken ourselves whenever we run to see what they're doing.

"We should proceed, not in panic," he said, "but in the same careful say we have gone about development of other weapons . . . "

McMahon, reiterating his "moral crusade for peace" proposal of last week, warned of the intent of proposals for international inspection of atomic projects. He said:

"The purpose of that kind of treaty was for the purpose of notifying us of its violation. It would provide for our policemen in Russia, and Russian policemen here. If there was a violation on the beat, we'd know it.

"That would give us the chance," he said, "to go to our atomic piles and turn out weapons. It would give us a chance for our lives."

$10 Billion a Year

Senator McMahon's proposal, as he outlined it in the broadcast, would require as expenditure of 10 billion dollars a year for five years. This would provide for implementation of the President's Point IV program; general aid for all nations—"including Russia," McMahon said—and for development and dissemination of peace uses of atomic energy.

In return, Russia would have to agree to inspection of her atomic projects and a reduction in her armament programs.

If the Soviet rejected such a proposal, McMahon added, the "world would have the knowledge where the responsibility lies."

Sparkman said international control and inspection should be established within the framework of the U. N.

A Stone Wall

"I realize," he added, "that I'm up against a stone wall when I say that."

Senator Ferguson said America will never use the H-bomb as an aggressive weapon, but only as a defensive one.

"We should treat it," he said, "as a weapon for peace."

He urged—and the other Senators agreed—that the United States must cross the Iron Curtain to "try to reach the souls of the peoples there."

Moderator of the broadcast was newspaperman Blair Moody.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said yesterday the prospect of developing a super-powerful hydrogen bomb—both in this country and in Russia—should brighten chances for international control of such mass weapons.

The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee based the opinion on the instinct for self-preservation—hydrogen bombing would kill Russians "the same as anybody else," he commented.

And he pointed up the idea by a suggestion, all the more jolting for Tydings' casual use of figures, that it would take good evacuation plans well executed to save even "15 or 20 per cent" of the population of a hydrogen-bombed large city.

He said such plans for this country are in the discussion stage and urged speed on their development.

"Certainly, with so many of the men, women and children on the face of the earth threatened with incineration or total extinction, in the event of another world war, with the weapons now in the offing, it would seem to me that common sense . . . would impel all people to try to arrive at some solution for the control of these mass-killing weapons," Tydings said in a radio broadcast (WBAL, Baltimore.)

He went on: "I should think that Russia would rather devote her energies and her plans toward creating a more prosperous country for the Russian people, raising their standards of livings, than to waste their substance on such things as the hydrogen bomb if it could be laid aside with safety.

"Which it could be, if they would meet with us and agree not to produce it, not to build plants for producing it, and permit the kind of inspection necessary so we would know, as well as they, that all of us were keeping the faith and that no hydrogen bombs were in existence."

President Truman, in ordering work toward the H-bomb, said the United States was undertaking it in the interests of peace and security. He has called repeatedly for real international control of atomic weapons.

Tydings said the Russian idea of inspection, on the other hand, is "to take us around instead of our having the right to go where we wish" in the Soviet Union.

terday. Among them was Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), not a committee member, who declared:

"It would only be a showing of good faith for Britain to turn him over to the United States. When spies come from a friendly nation, that nation ought to be ready and willing to turn them over to us for prosecution."

Should Fuchs be convicted in the United States under the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, he could be subject to the death penalty. One of the specific acts of which he is accused took place in 1947, after the Atomic Energy Act became effective.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has been quoted by Senators as revealing that Fuchs passed both atomic and hydrogen bomb information to Russia as a result of his work here during the war. This view has been confirmed by other sources, including Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves who headed the United States-British-Canadian atomic bomb project from 1943 to 1946.

Hoover, who testified behind closed doors Friday before a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, will appear in an executive session of McMahon's committee this morning. This afternoon, Groves will return to testify before the same committee at a session open to the public.

Fears that revelation of Fuchs' apparent breach of trust might endanger atomic cooperation among the United States, Britain and Canada were decried yesterday by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

John Young, Fall River (Mass.) industrialist and philanthropist, told a Y.M.C.A. International Crossroads breakfast group yesterday the spirit of brotherhood is the only power that can combat the H-bomb.

Young was introduced by Robert B. Doing of New York, national vice president of the Y.M.C.A. Greetings were extended by Arne Sorensen, former cabinet minister of Denmark. About 100 attended the breakfast at the Central Y.M.C.A., 1736 G st. nw., including representatives of 12 foreign countries.

Cathedral Dean Urges Feb. 22 As 'National Repentance Day'

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

The Dean of the Washington Cathedral yesterday urged that February 22 be proclaimed a "Day of National Repentance" for the "reexamination of our national aims in the context of world history."

Speaking at the morning service, the Very Rev. John W. Suter declared the hydrogen bomb "hangs like a pall over what we call our civilization."

We stand at a cross-roads where we cannot see ahead, he said, declaring it is "a road overhung with darkness and a new kind of despair—a defeatism wherein our cherished conception of the entire physical and material world is about to become obsolete."

The time has come, he said, for "honest soul-searching, for a review of motives, for a restatement of aims."

February 22, George Washington's birthday and Ash Wednesday, the first day of Lent, can become a day when all the people of the Nation "can join in an observance which will release into our sick and sadly confused world the incalculable reserve of moral and spiritual power," he said.

At Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd. nw., the Rev. Dr. Orris G. Robinson warned against allowing fear to rule the Nation's actions and called for "moral and spiritual strength to meet the emergency of these times."

"Don't, please, let us argue with ourselves that we will not use the hydrogen bomb," he declared. "We used the atomic bomb and we are the only people who have used it. There is no power of words to make the people of other nations believe that we will not use this," he said.

The only way to convince the world we have "a moral restraint that will hold us in check" is to hold up production of the bomb and to "seek a new approach to the nations of the world to lay aside war as a means of settling differences," he said.

Asserting the United States already has the atom bomb and the hydrogen bomb, and that other more devastating bombs may be developed, the Rev. Dr. Edward O. Clark said "all such bombs may prove to be more of a boomerang than a blessing."

In view of the possibility of a war of annihilation, the United States and all other nations "are needing more than anything else to stand in the place of prayer," he said at Chevy Chase Baptist Church, 5671 Western ave. nw.

"We will find essential security in a world organized on a cooperative and friendly basis," he said, urging "toward that end we must work with all the intensity of spirit we have."

At First Presbyterian Church of Arlington, Glebe rd. at Wilson blvd., the Rev. George Hileman Yount, declared the power of the atom bomb "has been dwarfed by the possibility of the more powerful hydrogen, or Hell-bomb."

He contrasted the destructive power of the bombs to the hopeful, spiritual power of God in Christ which comes to people in moments of need when they seek Him.

Atom Policy Group Is Urged

telligence about foreign relations.

"As long as we look at the atomic issue as an isolated issue, there is no hope for a solution," commented William Higinbotham, former chairman of the FAS.

Members of the FAS Administrative council suggested that only one or two scientists would be needed on the proposed commission, in order to "educate" the other members, if necessary, on technical questions involved.

Other members, they suggested, would be persons informed of foreign policy, economic affairs, military considerations and "politicians" in the best sense of the word.

The group indorsed the statement of the previous day of 12 top American scientists, headed by Dr. Hans Bethe. They had declared that the hydrogen bomb should never be used by this Nation unless it was attacked first.

Also, the FAS group discounted rumors of a "scientists' strike" against work on developing the H-bomb.

They explained that scientists are not a "homogenous group," but have all the differences of "ordinary people." Thus, they said, it may well be that individual scientists, acting from their own conscience, will chose not to be associated with H-bomb work.

In their statement proposing the creation of a public commission, the FAS said:

"Two things should be clear to the American people:

"1. We can be sure that if we build H-bombs, the Russians will build them also; we must have no illusions of security based on a monopoly of a super weapon.

"2. The kind of security we want can be held only by building a stable peace. We know that no weapon, however powerful, can give security to any nation; no defense will bring freedom from fear . . .

"Our country must turn from the false security of bombs to the slow, difficult task of gaining security by a positive approach to peace through mutual agreement, to peace by general disarmament, to peace by world-wide economic reconstruction and development."

Wolfe gave high praise to last week's proposal of Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) for a solution to be obtained by international atomic control coupled with heavy American donations for world economic rehabilitation. It was that sort of a proposal, Wolfe said, which the proposed public commission could examine and report on.

The FAS claims a membership of about 1500 scientists, most of them in chapters at the principal atomic research and development centers working with or as part of the Atomic Energy Commission program.

Text of Scientists' Federation Proposal

THE ATOMIC armament race has entered a new phase with President Truman's "go ahead" signal for development of the hydrogen bomb. In this new phase two things should be clear to the American people: (1) We can be sure that if we build H-bombs, the Russians will build them also; we must have no illustions of security based on monopoly of a super weapon. (2) The kind of security we want can be had only by building a stable peace. We know that no weapon, however powerful, can give security to any nation; no defense will bring freedom from fear.

No Nation is secure against the hydrogen bomb. Of all the cities in the world, not one is safe. Of all the cities in the world, not one presents a better target than New York. Superficially, the super bomb appears to threaten our rival, but the President and the people must see that the threat lies nowhere sharper than here, in our homes, in our cities. American scientists are of many minds on many issues, but on one we unite: our country must turn from the false security of bombs to the slow, difficult task of gaining security by a positive approach to peace through mutual agreement, to peace by gradual disarmament, to peace by world-wide economic reconstruction and development.

THE policy of our country has faced in two directions. We have sought to achieve international control of atomic energy on one hand, while on the other basing our military planning on atomic armaments. The question which faces us today is whether the United States will persist in its avowed policy of seeking peace through agreement or whether it will pay lip service to this policy while relying on force.

The decision on the hydrogen bomb can be interpreted by the world as a symbol that we have now set our course. We have placed a terrible weight in the balance for destruction. A greater weight must be placed on the side of real security and peace. Already a few voices have solemnly and wisely urged such a course. We repeat now our request that the President establish without delay a new commission, with the broad perspective of the Acheson-Lilienthal Commission of 1946, to examine the whole issue of our atomic policy and to make a fresh start, looking toward a policy which offers some real hope of breaking the present stubborn deadlock.

The United States has sought atomic agreement separate from other related issues. It seems necessary now to seek a solution within a much broader framework. Our objective must continue to be effective atomic control, including thorough-going inspection. But we must consider alternative proposals; perhaps proposals without the far-reaching international ownership concept, perhaps proposals making greater concessions to national interests, certainly proposals in which procedural issues are subordinate to the simple question of adequacy in giving nations warning of possible violation.

We call upon Americans to see in the President's announcement a new warning and a new challenge. We still have hope that there are no differences so great that they can be solved only by atomic war.

Tito Paper Denies Catholics Oppressed

By Alex H. Singleton

Belgrade, Feb. 5 (AP). — Yugoslavia's official press today accused The Vatican, Time magazine, the Chicago Tribune and the Hearst newspapers of conducting a coordinated campaign against this country, alleging anti-Catholic persecution.

The newspaper Borba, voice of Premier Marshal Tito's government, denounced in particular an article written by Time's Paris correspondent, Andre Laguerre, after an 18-day visit to Belgrade viewing conditions in Yugoslavia.

Borba said Laguerre wrote that the Catholic Church is persecuted, and that thousands of priests have been arrested and subjected to terror.

(The Time magazine article said that in the past five years the Communist regime in Yugoslavia has killed 350 to 400 priests and imprisoned an equal number. It said it had killed one Catholic bishop and imprisoned two.)

Borba said Laguerre's report does "not deserve serious attention because we knew when he came to Belgrade how and what he was going to write," and that he came with "more or less finished articles . . . dictated by his chief," Editor Henry R. Luce.

Borba said that simultaneously with the publication of the Time article, L'Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, and the Vatican radio began "invented" attacks charging church persecution in Yugoslavia.

The paper quoted—and denied—alleged reports from these two sources that 500 nuns here had been forced to leave their congregations and that Yugoslavia has been destroying Catholic churches with dynamite.

It linked the alleged campaign to an article in the Chicago Tribune a few weeks ago which purportedly described Yugoslavia as a "dirty and lousy nation." Borba said this should not be surprising in view of the Tribune's "very sympathetic attitude toward Axis powers" during the war.

Borba leveled no specific accusations against the Hearst press. But it lumped all four—Time, the Chicago Tribune, the Hearst newspapers and the Vatican—together in saying the campaign for "defense of religious freedom" has not been started "casually."

Other Crops Trail

Russia Leads U. S. in Grains For Bread

Although Russia is ahead of the United States in the production of bread grains (wheat and rye) it is far behind, in spite of its larger size and population, in other crops.

This was apparent in the annual review of the world food situation by the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations of the Agriculture Department released yesterday.

The review disclosed that, although total world production of food is above prewar, per capita production is under the prewar years. Production has increased only 2 to 3 percent. Population has increased 10 percent since the 1930's.

U. S. Ahead in 'Meat' Grains

Among the comparisons between this country and the Soviet Union, the review showed:

1. In the crop year Russia produced 52,590,000 long tons (2240 pounds) of bread grains. Average prewar production was 55,340,000 tons. (It dropped to 38,750,000 during the war.)

In the same years bread grain production in North America went from an average before the war of 30,440,000 long tons to 41,220,000 last year.

2. In coarse grains—corn, barley, oats, sorghums, etc.—North American production went from an average prewar of about 89 million tons to about 120 million this year. In the same period Russian production dropped from 30 million to 21 million tons.

3. The coarse grains reflect the meat production. No attempt was made to estimate Russian meat production last year. But in prewar years, in spite of one-fourth more persons than in this country, Russian meat production was only 7,292,000,000 pounds. In the United States prewar meat production was more than 16 billion pounds, and that increased last year to more than 22 billion.

"Continued improvement in the food situation is foreseen for the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe in both production and consumption," the review said. "Collections of grain from the 1949 harvest exceeded those of a year ago, but commitments for export were smaller."

In spite of the general world improvement, OFAR stated, there were many countries, particularly in the Far East where consumption levels were still considerably below prewar.

"Several European countries were able to remove rationing during 1949 or to reduce materially the number of items which continued to be rationed.

"The average diet also was improved by increased consumption of more desirable foods such as fats, meats and dairy products, but the proportion of these foods in the average diet is still relatively low."

The benefits accruing to nations aided by the Marshall Plan were apparent in the report.

"In the ERP countries of Europe," it said, per capita consumption for the prewar period, for 1948-49 and 1949-50 is estimated at 2900, 2775 and 2800 calories respectively.

"In the non-ERP countries (excluding Russia but including Eastern Germany and Spain) the estimates for the same periods were 2875 for prewar, 2650 calories for 1948-49 and about 2650 for this year."

Russia Cuts Albanian Aid

zo, to to be flown to Tirana, the Albanian capital.

Albania has not been made a member of the Cominform and has not been given a treaty of friendship and mutual aid with the Soviet Union.

This was interpreted by Balkans experts as an indication of Russia's unwillingness to commit herself to any assistance in event of local difficulty.

The strength of Albania's army is estimated at some 60,000 men, equipped with a variety of types of arms originating in Germany, Italy, Russia and Britain.

The strength of the Soviet military mission in Albania, established there since 1945, is believed to be 2000 including advisers and technicians.

The chief asset of the country is its oil production, which under Italian rule was stepped up to some 300,000 tons a year. Most of the output reached Yugoslavia before the Tito-Stalin clash and more recently some of the oil was carried by Soviet ships to Romanian refineries for processing.

According to the survey of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, the collapse of the Greek rebels late last year has sealed the fate of Albania. Albania, the Institute report said, has "ceased to be of immediate importance to the Soviet Union as a base."

"At present Albanian Premier Enver Hoxha is faced with starvation, incipient mutiny and isolation," the report said. A reconciliation with Italy apparently was one of Hoxha's latest aims. Informed sources said Hoxha has tried to get immediate aid from Italy in exchange for oil supplies, through the pipeline which still runs beneath the Adriatic to the Italian refineries of Bari.

Berlin Coup Plot Reported

German youth ever to take place in Germany."

Eisler said 500,000 Communist youth, including delegates from Russia and 11 other countries, would gather in Berlin.

Sponsors of the "Youth Rally" already have asked permission to hold "sporting events" in the big Olympic Stadium in the British sector of Berlin May 28 — the D-Day of the reported putsch.

Police Clash With Reds

Kenneth T. Downs, American public affairs chief, said:

"We have plans for all eventualities. Naturally, normal security measures will be taken."

There was a clash today between German police and Communists who tried to invade the French sector of Berlin. One hundred Communists tried to break through a line of 300 waiting police and enter the French sector from the Soviet sector. The police hurled them back and arrested 30 of them.

The new Russian-East German Communist "baby" blockade continued intermittently. Last night police at the checkpoint on the border of the Soviet sector and western Germany passed Berlin-bound trucks freely.

This evening, they slowed down passage again and a backlog of waiting trucks started forming. By mid-evening only five to six trucks an hour were being passed.

Berlin police said also that the Russians had stopped some westbound trucks outside of Berlin.

AFL Sees Franco Recognition as Boon to Dictator

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 5 (U.P.). American Federation of Labor executives said today that by recognizing Franco the United States "would play directly into the hands" of Russia and "lend more to dictators" in Latin America.

The union's executive council said such diplomatic recognition would "pave the way for extensive financial aid to a despicable despotism" in Spain. It said the Franco government is "in the throes of a crisis which, if not alleviated by outside aid, can lead only to its doom."

The statement branded Franco as "a dangerous totalitarian force not only in Europe and Africa, but also in Latin America, where he has intimate connections with and serves as a model for the local dictatorships which are hostile to our democratic way of life."

Irish Setter Sets Record With Litter of 16 . . .

The Washington Post

16—COUNT 'EM—16—Kennel men took to record books yesterday and came up with assertion that Tarashan's healthy litter of 16 probably set record for registered Irish setters. Average is put at eight or nine. Tarashan, holder of numerous blue ribbons, gave birth to the litter Saturday and here poses sadly with Alex Tod, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy S. Tod, of 805 16th st., Alexandria, Va., the owners. Mother's full name is Knotty Notes Tarashan O'Kells. Sire was Bob's Own Red Michael, a champion himself. There are definitely 16 in the litter, even if two are a little difficult to distinguish in the rush for sustenance

Detective on Robbery Detail Wounds One of Fleeing Pair

In the wee hours of yesterday the police radio barked out a robbery report in the 1200 block of 5th st. nw. It was the signal for Detective Sergt. Herbert C. Young and his partner, Detective Sergt. Murray Kutner, to roll their Robbery Squad cruiser into high.

As they approached the scene, two men started running off on N st. The sergeants debarked, ordered the men to halt. Nobody halted, and the chase was on.

The men ran into 417 N st., the sergeants racing after. The men ran out the back door, the sergeants still following and still yelling warnings to stop.

In the alley, the policemen began losing ground. Sergeant Young, who was officially commended with Kutner last year for "breaking" a restaurant robbery, shook loose his .38, took aim in the dark and fired once.

One fugitive dropped. The other got away. The wounded man shouted, "It wasn't me, it's the other one who did it."

While Kutner stood by the wounded man, Young went to 1243 5th st. nw., home of Roosevelt T. Wilson, 49, who reported the robbery. He said the wounded man was not one of those who robbed him.

The wounded man, identified as George A. Turner, 22, of 417 N st. nw., was taken to Gallinger Hospital, a bullet hole through his shoulder.

Wilson said he was robbed of $25 in front of his house on Friday evening. At 2 a. m. yesterday he decided to call police.

Police Seeking Trio For Armed Robberies

District police last night were seeking three men believed responsible for two robberies and one unsuccessful attempt, all reported in the same neighborhood within a space of about 30 minutes Saturday night.

Victims of successful holdups, police said, were: Donald Fenn 1607 Isherwood st. ne., who was robbed of $2 by a trio while walking in the 1700 block of D st. ne. around 9 p. m., and James Journey, 21, 5654 S. Meade st., Arlington, who yielded $35 a few minutes later to three men at 19th and E. Capitol st. In both cases, the victims reported one of the holdup men was armed with a nickel-plated revolver.

Shortly before Fenn was held up, a man wielding a nickel-plated revolver tried unsuccessfully to hold up Mrs. Edith Corson, 50, manager of a High ice-cream store at 321 15th st. ne.

First Gaston Lecture Set at G. U.

Georgetown University yesterday announced the inauguration of a new series of annual lectures.

The series, named the "William Gaston Lectures" after Georgetown's first student, are sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences.

First of the series will be given at 8 p. m. Thursday in Gaston Hall on the campus, 37th and O sts. nw. Subsequent lectures will be given February 20 and March 6.

The Rev. Francis W. Anderson, S.J., a former dean of Baghdad College, Iraq, and attache to the Apostolic Delegation of Egypt and Palestine, will be the first lecturer. His subject will be "Middle East Actualities."

He has recently returned from a six-month special mission to the Middle East in behalf of the Sacred Congregation for the Oriental Churches.

Subsequent lecturers will be James A. Farley and the Rev. John Courtney Murray, S.J.

The lectures are open to Georgetown sudents and their guests.

Opening of enrollment for a 16-week course in journalism was announced yesterday by A. S. Curtis, dean of the National School of Journalism.

Classes will start February 14, and be held from 7:30 to 9 p. m. each Tuesday and Thursday at the Boyd School of Commerce, 12th and G sts. nw.

The course will be conducted by Truman Felt, Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Star-Times.

Kirby Smith, 22, shot himself in the palm of his left hand with a .22 rifle yesterday at his home, Ridge road, Washington Grove, Md. He was given first aid by the Gaithersburg Rescue Squad and taken to the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda.

2 Youths Held After Crashing Stolen Auto

Maryland State police yesterday turned over two alleged auto thieves to Baltimore police before the Department of Education in Baltimore knew its car was stolen.

The car, however, was not returned with the two prisoners. It had been wrecked at the end of a four-mile, 90-mile-an-hour chase on Baltimore blvd. near Waterloo.

Arrested and delivered to Baltimore police were: Ernest L. Diggs, 18, and William Eugene Brooks, 18, both of Baltimore.

State Trooper M. J. Say saw the car about 3 a. m. on the Baltimore Pike near the Dorsey stretch. Ia was zig-zagging, he reported. He gave chase. As he drove alongside and turned on his red "stop" sign, the car sped away.

The troper gave chase once more at speeds up to 90 miles an hour. The chase ended when the car turned over. Neither youth was injured, police said. Both jumped from the car and ran but were captured after several hundred yards.

Police said the car was taken from a garage of the Department of Education in Baltimore during the night and the loss had not yet been discovered when police checked at the garage.

New Cabinet Formed in Iraq

Baghdad, Iraq., Feb. 5 (U.P.)—Senator Tewfik El Suweidi announced today he has formed a new Iraq cabinet, with himself as premier and foreign minister.

El Suweidi set up the new government at the request of Regent Prince Abdul-Ilah to replace the cabinet of Ali Jowdat, who resigned February 1.

Assemblymen Urge Chiang To Rule Again

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 5 (AP).—National Assemblymen on Formosa petitioned Generalissimo Chiang Kan-shek today to resume the presidency of Nationalist China.

"If you refuse, you will go against the wishes of the whole Nation," they said in a telegram to Chiang at his Grass Mountain retreat near Taipei.

Simultaneously they addressed a sharply worded radiogram to acting President Li Tsung-jen in New York, saying they were "very indignant over the many wrongs done to the country and the constitution."

Li was urged to "state your position clearly."

Chiang "retired" from the presidency January 19, 1949, letting Li take over for a futile attempt to negotiate peace with the Communists.

Prolonged friction between the Chiang and Li factions was climaxed last December, when Li flew to the United States for treatment of an ulcer.

As things stand, Chiang cannot resume his position as President unless Li reverts to his former post of Vice President. This Li has consistently refused to do.

The Nationalist China News editorialized today:

"The time has come for a final showdown. Either Chiang or Li must assume the presidency . . . A disunited Nationalist camp cannot expect to win support from Uncle Sam."

The official Central Daily News commented in simiular vein Saturday.

The Nationalists announced that in the past week their air force had sunk or damaged 332 Communist boats along the mainland coast. A dispatch from Hainan said raids this weekend sank 80 boats.

U. S. Accidents Set Low Mark

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—America scored its best safety rate on record last year—but the cost in dead and injured still vies with this Nation's battle losses in World War I.

This is the United States 1949 toll from accidents:

Killed—91,000.

Injured—9,400,000.

The cost—$7,200,000,000.

United States losses in World War I were 126,000 killed or died and 234,300 injured. The estimated war cost to this country was $35,413,000,000.

The National Safety Council, which released the figures, today said that the Nation's 1949 all-accident death rate was 61.2 per hundred thousand population. This is the lowest since such records were first compiled in 1900. The previous low rate was 64.3 in 1948, when 94,000 were killed.

Still, one out of every 16 persons in the Nation suffered a disabling injury in 1949.

The safety rate improved over 1948 in all major divisions.

Motor vehicle accidents killed 31,500, a 2 percent decline from the 32,259 toll in 1948 and well below the 39,969 killed in the record high year 1941. The death rate per 100 million miles was estimated at 7.4, also the lowest on record.

However, 1949 traffic accidents caused approximately 1,100,000 nonfatal injuries and destroyed or damaged $1,100,000,000 worth of property.

Unit Planning Probe of FTC 'Somnolence'

By the United Press

The House Small Business Committee yesterday announced it will investigate the Federal Trade Commission to see whether the agency should be shaken up "from top to bottom."

The inquiry, into what was described as the FTC's "Rip van Winkle somnolence" in curbing growth of monopoly, was called for in a committee progress report to Congress.

The report also rapped military and other Government buying agencies for snarling their procedures with red tape and allegedly keeping small business from a "fair share" of their dollars.

Concern was expressed that new bans against "five percenters" who get commissions for handling Government accounts might work against little firms bidding for business. Such firms must work through commission agents because they cannot afford their own, the committee said.

The committee, headed by Chairman Wright Patman (D., Tex.), is charged with protecting the place in the Nation's economy of small business of all kinds. It carries on a continuous investigation of monopolies and trade practices.

The report said the FTC inquiry "is for the purpose of building up the commission rather than merely emphasizing its vicissitudes and weaknesses."

"Both fact and fancy have built a structure of opinion, which is abroad today in the land, that the commission, its staff, or both believe that certain of the antitrust laws under FTC jurisdiction cannot be enforced," it said.

It said the object of the inquiry will be to determine whether "Congress is justified in supporting" the commission and whether a reorganization "from top to bottom should be recommended."

Lobby Probers to Try New-Type Hearing

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A revolutionary technique in congressional hearings is slated to be tried out when the Special House Committee to Investigate Lobbying opens hearings late this month, Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) told The Washington Post yesterday.

The new plan, designed to shed light without heat, envisions allowing both sides of any given issue to be presented at once.

Just for example, Buchanan said, if the committee decides to hear evidence pertaining to the activities of the real estate lobby, counsel for opposing interests—in this case advocates of public housing—will be given a chance to ask questions of the witnesses.

Conversely, the real estate groups will be given an equal chance to put questions to the public housing advocates.

The real estate groups were cited merely as an example, and it is not to be assumed that the committee has any more interest in that lobby than in many others.

Buchanan said the purpose of this type of hearing is twofold:

1. It will return the congressional hearing to its original purpose of having the elected representatives of the people hear both sides of any issue before making any proposed changes in the law. Committee members will be sitting, Buchanan explained, in their proper capacity as judge and jury rather than as prosecutors.

2. It will give the committee the benefit of expert advice on both sides of an issue. In the very nature of things, as Buchanan explained, members of Congress simply cannot be experts in all fields, and a staff of any reasonable proportions cannot become expert in all fields such as are necessarily covered in an inquiry as broad as this. But if opposing interests who are expert in their fields are permitted to submit questions to each other, Congress—and the public—will get the benefit of two-way expert advice it was explained.

Buchanan's staff has already discovered there are 500 organized groups registered under the lobby laws. So far, these groups, he said, have collected 55 million dollars to influence legislation, and have spent 27½ million in the three years the registration law has been in effect.

There are some 2000 registered lobbyists, Buchanan declared.

The major purpose of the hearing is to discover, first, how the new lobbying law is working, and second, to learn whether and where the law needs strengthening.

Buchanan stressed that with the right of petition guaranteed under the Constitution, the committee has no desire or intent to interfere with legitimate and proper lobbying. He stressed the bipartisan harmony existing within the committee, and its desire to have a full, free and fair inquiry conducted without bias.

measures would help speed legislation.

That there will be definite recommendations for new Federal laws appears a foregone conclusion. A major reason is that the non-Federal participants include several persons who have vigorously campaigned for just such action.

Among them are Mayor de Lesseps Morrison of New Orleans and Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles. The District's George Morris Fay will be one of 12 representing the United States Attorneys Association. Fay has led the D. C. drive on gambling.

Truman Adds Prestige

The two members of Congress, who have been plugging for congressional action, were jubilant yesterday to know that President Truman will address the crime conference, thus adding to its prestige and publicity.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) who has called for the all-out Senate investigation, said he expects the Senate Judiciary Committee to act at today's meeting on his bill. It already has subcommittee approval.

"I think it's fine the President will address the conference. We've had the closest cooperation with Justice on this matter so far and they have invited me to sit in next week," Kefauver said, adding:

"I'm sure the conference work and the Senate investigation will dovetail. I'm highly pleased with the reaction I've had so far from members of the Senate.

"We've already had a great deal of information from various crime commissions and both my own staff and that of the Senate subcommittees working on it so as to lose no time."

Kefauver said he, too, hopes for definite legislation at this session. He said his idea is to have a broad investigation to determine all the possible needs for Federal action.

On the House side Representative Prince H. Preston, jr. (D., Ga.), sponsor of a bill to bar interstate shipment of slot machines, said he is "greatly encouraged" to know that interstate shipment of the one-armed bandits is No. 1 on the agenda of a subcommittee on Federal legislation.

"This action on the part of the Justice Department," Preston said, "indicates they have taken cognizance of the need for this legislation and should, in my opinion, add considerable impetus to the drive to enact such a bill at this session."

Preston recalled that FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover has approved such a bill. Hoover did so with this declaration:

"Gambling today is the nest egg of the criminal underworld which operates throughout this country."

That statement is pretty much the theme song of the crime conference.

Preston's bill has won "strong sentiment" within the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, the Georgian said. But the committee has yet to refer it to a subcommittee for hearings.

$50,000 Blaze Sweeps Plant

Leibel said, was damaged by the fire.

The 30 percent of the plant that was not damaged, he added, contains machinery most needed for operation. Nonetheless, the plant, fully insured, will be out of operation "five days to a week," Leibel said.

Fire Sergt. Sidney Morey, 34, of No. 13 engine company, was overcome by smoke and suffered a minor burn on the neck. He was treated at the scene.

Cause Not Known

Cause of the blaze was undetermined last night, but it was believed to have started in a ground floor office.

The $50,000 damage estimate was made by Fire Capt. Roy Warfield, acting fire marshal.

A watchman, Hilary Young, 48, of 1245-A Carrollburg pl. sw., said he noticed "flames shooting up in the office" shortly before 5:20.

"In about a minute and a half, no one had come as yet," he continued, "the flames were getting real bad and I asked a man in the street to break a fire box."

The first alarm came in at 5:20 p. m.; the second at 5:25 p. m. and the third at 5:29 p. m. A special alarm for two engine companies was sounded at 5:44. Four minutes later the blaze was reported under control by the fire radio.

Twenty-five pieces of fire equipment, five police scout cars and at least a half-dozen police motorcycles responded. Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, and Chief Fire Engineer Joseph A. Mayhew directed activities.

A stiff south wind threatened to hamper firemen.

Forty Capitol Transit buses in a terminal next to the plant were removed to prevent damage.

The brick plant is two stories high at the front and tapers to one story at the rear. Its depth is nearly a city block.

Leibel said the most of the damaged equipment include "finishing machines" in the front of the plant. The building's wooden walls also were ravaged, he added.

But in the part of the building not damaged, he said, are expensive cleaning machines and the plant boiler room.

Fire Marshal Warfield said the fire was sweeping the building when firemen reached the scene. Warfield said he would try to find out why the fire made such headway before firemen were called.

The fire department said the first call was made by Mrs. Mary E. Tancil, 75, of 1214 S. Capitol st., who said she saw the plant afire from her window across the street.

Purse Thief Misses $600 Church Collection

A young purse snatcher fled with $2 but overlooked a collection plate with more than $600 in the basement of the Columbia Heights Christian Church, 1435 Park rd. nw., yesterday.

Mrs. Marjorie Gilliand, 27, 3300 Chauncey pl., Mount Rainier, Md., told police she was washing communion glasses when the youth entered and asked for the sexton. Then he snatched her pocketbook and ran, unaware that the full collection plate was lying underneath her coat on a chair nearby.

Kozicki was admitted to Casualty Hospital with head injuries. His wife, Cecile, also 50, was treated for lacerations on the forehead, and a son, Harry, 24, for injuries to the left elbow, knee and jaw.

A Miss Olga Rudy, address not taken, was treated for bruises and shock and not admitted to the hospital. The injured were brought to the hospital by the Marlboro Rescue Squad.

Washington police put out a call for witnesses to help them find the hit-run driver who struck 6-year-old Arthur Thomas Parker at 12th st. and Washington dr. on the Mall at 4:50 p. m. yesterday.

Son of Mrs. Sadie Parker, of 2131 Stevens st. nw., Arthur was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible fracture of the right leg and injuries to a shoulder.

At 8:05 p. m., Francis J. Sumner, 3d, of 58 Knowles ave., Kensington, Md., suffered a possible fractured skull when he was struck by a car when crossing Maple ave. at East-West hwy., Bethesda.

Driver of the car was identified by police as Dr. George I. Mishtowt, 33, of 4522 Stanford st., Chevy Chase, Md. Sumner was taken to Suburban Hospital.

Baltimore, Feb. 5 (AP).—A clothing manufacturer was charged today with trying to set fire to his four-floor storerooms in downtown Baltimore.

The establishment is two doors west of another clothing store that caught fire Saturday afternoon. Two firemen died in the six-alarm blaze.

Police said Leon L. Goldberg, 37, owner of the Goldberg Clothing manufacturing Co., was charged with arson and released in $10,000 bail for a hearing Thursday.

His establishment is located in the upper four floors of a five-story building at 113 West Baltimore Street.

Md. Delegates Seek Formula on Bonus

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Maryland legislators, scenting a bonus battle, tonight sought a magic formula to dispel the fear of "sleepless nights" in this election year.

Returning to the State House tomorrow after a weekend recess, the General Assembly girded for a showdown on the question of a bonus for veterans.

Two State Senators said privately the issue would be the "hot potato" of the still-young 30-day session which started last Wednesday.

Only silence has come from Governor Lane and his Democratic administration leaders on their bonus stand. Lane also has yet to announce whether he will be a candidate for reelection.

A Republican, Senator Phoebus of Somerset County, promised to introduce the bonus measure this week. His bill, now being checked over by the attorney general's office, would provide payments up to $500 for vetreans of World War II.

Phoebus leaves open the question of where to get the 75 million dollars to pay for the bonus. That would be settled if and after voters approve the idea at a November referendum.

Any bonus paid out of current funds would wreak havoc in Lane's record-breaking 143-million-dollar State budget for fiscal 1951. The Senate finance committee tomorrow afternoon will start work on the budget bill, getting "the background of the whole picture" from Budget Director James G. Rennie.

All 105 Democrats and 47 Republicans in the Legislature will be up for reelection next fall.

Kitterman and his son, Donald, 20, went to Wahkeeny Park to check on a report of a suspected liquor runner.

The elder Kitterman said they found McCauley, with a panel truck and a number of cases of liquor, which he said was purchased in Texas for his own use. He offered to drive into town so the story could be checked.

Young Kitterman got into the truck with McCauley. The deputy sheriff arranged to meet a highway patrol car farther down the road. At the meeting place, McCauley came out of the truck with one of the Lugers and forced young Kitterman to drive him off in the highway patrol car. As they left, he fired a spray of bullets at State Patrolman Richard Vannola and the elder Kitterman "to show them he meant business."

Another Car Taken

Later, the gunman commandeered another car near Bergen Park when the patrol car went off the road, and forced Kitterman to drive him to Idaho Springs. The young man was released about 3 a. m. near Idaho Springs.

The gunman then drove to the home of Les Miller near Idaho Springs, routed him out of bed, and forced him to drive McCauley and his companion back toward Denver.

When young Ketterman reported his release, officers raced toward Idaho Springs. Three patrol cars spotted Miller's car and ran it off the road with the assistance of two approaching police cars. The capture was made at 3:30 a. m.

Final Approval Appears Near For Virginia School Measure

Richmond, Va., Feb. 5 (AP).—The State's first venture into the field of direct grants to localities for school construction probably will get final approval by the General Assembly tomorrow.

All that remains to be done on the matter in the Legislature is for the House to agree to several amendments the Senate tacked onto the 45-million-dollar proposal.

Since the grants bill cleared committees last week there was never any question of its passage in virtually the form the Governor recommended—two thirds of the 45 million dollars available immediately and the remainder after July 1, 1951—with no local matching requirements. The question was mainly when Administration leaders in the House and Senate wanted it passed since they had more than the necessary support in each house to pass it as emergency legislation.

Emergency measures — those that become effective immediately upon the signature of the Governor—require approval of four fifths of the members voting.

Senate amendments would limit use of the State grants to actual construction and would exclude cost of land and equipment. They would also bind localities to use the funds within limits specified in the act or face State withholding penalties on other school funds due them.

Still another Senate amendment spells out the State's position with regard to grants for school construction: the act shall not be interpreted as an expression of State policy nor does it commit the State to future action beyond the limits it sets.

Both branches face a busy legislative week with heavy calendars of bills requiring action and a full list of committee meetings and hearings.

In the Senate the Moses-Warren-Palmer bill giving the State Corporation Commission authority to set wholesale rates on electric power comes up for passage.

One of Manager Harris' arguments: Joe Page has demonstrated that a relief pitcher can be the highest paid man on the staff . . . Del Baker, a Coast League manager last season, goes off the deep end in his appraisal of Luke Easter, labeling the big colored first baseman, "the greatest hitter since Babe Ruth" . . . If South America would take back its gray colt Balan, along with its rhumba and samba, Trainer Ben Jones would feel better about the chances of his speed horse, Coaltown, in the $50,000 Widener. Balan is a stretch-running threat.

POVICH

GEORGE MARSHALL displays all the exuberance of a cub reporter in his news letter to Redskin ticket holders listing the star rookies drafted by his team. He describes Ralph Shoaf as the University of Virginia's best back in '49." In the interest of accuracy, Shoaf was an obscure figure in the Virginia backfield compared to their ace, Johnny Papit . . . Buck Newsom was the last pitcher to enter the select circle of men who have pitched 200 victories in the majors, but Bob Feller needs only eight wins to join the same company . . . Only four pitchers now in the majors have won more than 100 games—Feller, Newhouser, Trout and Reynolds . . . Small wonder the St. Louis Browns held out for Kretlow of the Tigers in the deal that sent Gerry Priddy to that team. Kretlow scored only three victories last year—but all of them were against the Browns . . . Former Lightweight Champion Bob Montgomery stayed upright in his fight with Aldo Minelli at Uline's the other night, but figuratively he fell on his face in his attempted comeback and ought to hang up his gloves permanently . . . The inconvenience of getting a bet down on the horses in Washington is now so great, what with the bookie ranks depopulated, only the confirmed horse bettors are still in action . . . Phil Rizzuto, at 5 feet 6, retains his distinction of being the smallest player in the majors by ½ inch against the challenge of George Genovese, the Nats' shortstop from the Coast League.

AWAY-FROM-THE-TRACK betting is not illegal in England, but under the Betting Act of 1853 it must be carried out on a credit basis with a bookmaker . . . But in Ireland where cash bookmaking is licensed, the government takes 7½ percent of the bookies' volume for the day, whether he wins or loses . . . After shooting rounds of 69, 67 in the first day's play at the Tucson Open, Sammy Snead could have been in a mood to quit the game. All it netted him at that point was a nine-way tie for fifteenth place . . . A maker of women's golf clothes is angeling the Women's Pro Golf Association, posting $17,000 in prize money for four tournaments on the winter circuit and flying the leading contenders to the scenes in the company plane. It's Fred Corcoran's latest promotional bit . . . The American League is celebrating the fiftieth year of its founding, and Clark Griffith is aware of the contrasts. As manager of the White Sox in 1901, he won the league's first pennant. He's taking an eighth-place club into the Golden Jubilee year . . . The White Sox have refused to swap any of three of their pitchers, even up, for Ray Scarborough . . . The American Cat Association makes the claim that only the pigeon has sharper homing instincts than tabby's ability to travel cross-country back to familiar scenes.

JOHN JACHYM, who bought 40 percent of the Nats stock with the aid of a $400,000 loan, registered his first dismay when the learned the club has been operating without a public relations man . . . but the lack of a press agent who couldn't call attention to the Nats' eighth place status last season was a blessing . . . The prediction that the fights of the future will be held in television studios with the sponsors paying the purses is gaining credence. Only 943 fans saw the last show at Uline's, and the television revenue was double the gate receipts . . . Joe Louis apparently is weakening in his determination to stay retired. After consistently denying he would try a comeback, he said in his last interview, "I'll decide about that along about May" . . . Reports that Joe DiMaggio's new contract calls for a bonus based on the number of games he plays for the Yankees obviously are false. The major leagues years ago ruled out all bonus clauses except those based on attendance . . . In the past, players squawked too loudly that they were being withheld from games on orders of the front office to evade payment of bonuses on the number of hits made or games won.

U.S. Bobsled Team Retains Title With Record Time

Cortino D'Ampezzo, Italy, Feb. 5 (AP).—With defeat staring it in the face, a daredevil United States team careened down the treacherous Cortina course in record time today to retain the world four-man bobsled championship.

Stan Benham, captain of the Americans and the fire chief at Lake Placid, N. Y., never answered an alarm any faster than his quarterton sled rocketed to victory in its final icy run today.

Trailing the Swiss No. 1 team, headed by its international veteran Fritz Feierabend, after the opening two runs Saturday, Benham and his crew coolly came back for an astounding victory.

Only yesterday, Feierabend and his mates shattered the course record, but the United States foursome came right back and tacked up a new one. The time, on the final run, was 1 minute 21.03 seconds for the snaky, 16-curve 1648-meter slide. The Swiss No. 1 sled had made it in 1:21.64 yesterday.

It all added up to a total time of 5:28.72 for two runs yesterday, and the final two today, and it gave the United States its third consecutive victory in this hazardous competition.

Feierabend's bobsled had a total clocking of 5:29.56 for four runs. Another team from Switzerland was third, in 5:34.41.

The Norwegian sled piloted by Arne Holst overturned on the first run today, spilling its crew down the sheet-ice course at the dangerous "S" curve. Caare Christiansen, cut on the face, was carried away on a stretcher, but he recovered quickly from the shock. The others were unhurt.

Benham's crew consisted of Pat Martin, Massena, N. Y.; Jim Atkinson, Rome, N. Y.; and Bill D'Amico, Lake Placid.

Manila Bettors Sizzle as Judges Play See-Saw

Manila, Feb. 5 (AP).—The boys who put their money on Pretencion's nose—and there were plenty of them on the heavy favorite—are ready to rip up the San Lazaro track.

Judges first announced Pretencion had lost by a nose to Appalachicola. Then the photos were studied. No, it was Pretencion's nose that was first. Bet payoffs were suspended.

For a week the judges studied and studied the photos. Out came their verdict: Appalachicola had won after all. What was thought to be Pretencion's nose crossing the finish line first was a flying gob of mud.

Westfall Pilots Pulaski

Pulaski, Va., Feb. 5 (AP).—Bobby Westfall, 27-year-old slugging shortstop, who last year managed Federalsburg, Md., of the Class D Eastern Shore League, signed today to pilot the Pulaski Counts in the 1950 Appalachian League race.

Bucs' Deal With Pettit Approved By Chandler

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler said here today that he contemplates no further action in the case of Pittsburgh's $100,000 high school bonus pitcher, Paul Pettit.

Attending an afternoon session of baseball's executive council, Chandler said that in light of direct information now in his possession he saw no need for further action in the case.

This direct information was handed in by Chandler's special agent, Dick Butler, who investigated the signing of Pettit by a Hollywood movie producer while he still was in high school. Butler also was present when Pittsburgh bought Pettit's contract from the movie agent after the boy's graduation.

Saigh Stiff Plans Protest

Fred Saigh, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, said he still planned a formal protest to the commissioner's office in Cincinnati.

"I have no quarrel with Pittsburgh," said Saigh, "I just don't like the whole idea of dealing with agents."

The executive council recommended a rule that would permit a high school or college coach to act as a pro baseball scout. There is an important "except" clause that provides the coach cannot sign one of his own boys for the team he represents until a year after the boy has left school. The coach also must have a regular contract on file in the commissioner's office.

The executive council meeting was a forerunner of the twenty-seventh annual dinner of the New York Chapter of the Baseball Writers Association who in a night session honored New York Yankees' manager, Casey Stengel, and Shortstop Phil Rizzuto.

Stengel, Rizzuto Honored

Stengel, the "miracle man" who piloted the oft-injured Yanks to the American League pennant and a world series triumph over Brooklyn, received the William J. Slocum Memorial award.

Named after the late baseball writer, the Slocum award was given to Stengel for meritorious service to baseball over a long period of time.

Rizzuto, sparkplug of the Yankee infield through the nerve-tingling pennant race, was awarded the Sid Mercer Memorial Plaque as the outstanding major league player of the 1949 season. The award was named after the late Sid Mercer, famous sports writer of the New York Journal-American.

A capacity crowd of some 1350 jammed the grand ball room of the Waldorf-Astoria for the gathering of baseball notables.

Bauer Sisters Win Four-Ball

Hollywood, Fla., Feb. 5 (AP).—Marlene and Alice Bauer, golfing sisters from Midland, Tex., today won the fifth annual women's international four-ball golf championship before a record gallery of 3500, by a score of 6 and 5.

They defeated Betty Bush of Hammond, Ind., and Betty MacKinnon of Mount Pleasant, Tex., over the 6643-yard Orange Brook Golf Club in the 36-hole finals.

The Bauer girls—Alice is 22 and Marlene will be 16 later this month—won the first three holes and their opponents never recovered from that shock. The Texans held a 3-up lead at lunchtime and had a 71, one under men's par for the course, at that point.

The Bauer girls held a 5-up lead as they started the last nine and went 6-up on the twenty-eighth hole. They matched pars on the next three to end the four-day tournament.

American U. Meets Bucknell Tonight

American University bids for its fifth straight and thirteenth victory of the season tonight, entertaining Bucknell University at the A. U. gym in the only local college game.

Out of town games involving local teams find George Washington University at South Carolina and Maryland at Virginia Military Institute in two Southern Conference games, while Catholic University journeys to Baltimore to meet Towson State Teachers in a Mason-Dixon Conference game.

Daughtry, Jackson Head Turner Bouts

Leon Daughtry, local welterweight, gets his big chance to make a name for himself tonight at Turner's Arena when he tangles with Stonewall Jackson of Washington in an eight rounder.

Co-featured with the Daughtry-Jackson battle will be another eight involving former All-Army champ, Marshall Clayton and Baltimore's Tommy Sheppard who is making his debut in Washington.

Daughtry, who has won 11 of 12 pro bouts, his most recent a decision over Holly Mims, will be in for a real brawl with Jackson, a Stowe University student at Harper's Ferry, W. Va.

Jackson hit the spotlight last year when he beat Otis Graham in Philadelphia. Graham last week upset Bernard Docusen, the top welterweight challenger.

Clayton, with one draw, and seven wins in eight pro fights, will be getting his first chance as a main-eventer as a reward for his terrific performance at the Arena two weeks ago when he walked out to the center of the ring at the opening bell, met Marcela Pacheco with a looping right and knocked out the Puerto Rican after only 48 seconds of the round.

Preliminaries pit Washington's Red Hickerson against Bobby Busick of Baltimore. George Corrigan, Baltimore, takes on Henry Scott, Washington. Baltimore's Jimmy O'Brien meets Ralph Brown, Washington, and Rufus Berry goes against Kid Wolfe in an all-local scrap. All are four rounders.

Holy Cross Now Only Major Unbeaten Team

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Holy Cross' supercharged Crusaders are in seventh heaven today.

The purple-suited warriors from Worcester, Mass., are the only major unbeaten college basketball team in the Nation and they should encounter little difficulty keeping their noses clean the rest of the way.

Holy Cross, ruler of the Associated Press poll, rambled to its seventeenth straight victory last night while previously unbeaten Duquesne fell by the wayside.

The Crusaders rocked Brown, 83-39, while Duquesne was upset, 64-58, by Louisville's Cardinals. The second-ranked Dukes had 16 straight victories on the hip before the waterloo at Louisville.

Iowa Officials Tour U. S. On Football Coach Hunt

IOWA CITY, IOWA, Feb. 5 (AP).—Two University of Iowa officials left today on a tour of the country to interview candidates for the Iowa football coaching position.

Athletic Director Paul Brechler and Dr. Paul Blommers, chairman of the athletic board, said they planned to interview all the 10 or 12 candidates still in the running for the job.

Brechler said the tour will take them to both East and West coasts and "several other places." He declined to reveal their exact destinations because "you wouldn't have much trouble then guessing who we were going to talk to."

However, in Boston it was reported that Denny Myers, coach at Boston College, planned to meet Brechler and Blommers in New York tomorrow. There were reports that these coaches were also among those to be interviewed:

JIM TATUM, University of Maryland; Don Faurot, University of Missouri; Gomer Jones, line coach at Oklahoma; Larry Siemering, College of the Pacific; Kip Taylor of Oregon State; Wes Fry, assistant coach at the University of California.

At College Park, Jim Tatum said:

"It's news to me. I didn't know they were coming. They haven't made any appointment with me."

Tatum said the only reason he could assign for his name being mentioned was that he coached at Iowa Preflight during the war.

Touchdowners Fete McKinney

Senator Clyde R. Hoey, former Governor of North Carolina, Caps player-coach, Bob Feerick and Naval Academy mentor, Ben Carnevale will be among the guests at the Touchdown Club luncheon today in honor of Bones McKinney.

McKinney, 6 foot 6 inch star of the Caps, started his court career under Carnevale at the University of North Carolina. The entire Caps team will be on hand for today's luncheon to pay homage to the likeable Bones.

The Washington area college basketball coaches will also be on today's guest list. Buddy O'Grady of Georgetown, Maryland's Flucie Stewart, American's Staff Cassell, Abe Rosenfield of Catholic and George Garber, freshman mentor at George Washington, pinch hitting for Bill Reinhart who is out of town with the Colonial varsity will all attend.

AAU Convention Scheduled Here

The Shoreham Hotel has been selected as official headquarters for the national convention of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, it was announced yesterday by Eddie Rosenblum, president of the District AAU, which will be hosts to the national assembly here on December 7-10.

At the invitation of the local association, Washington was selected as the 1950 convention site in a precedent-setting move by the national convention two years ago in New York.

Early was released recently by Washington, who recalled him from the Lookouts late last season.

Virginian's 267 Beats Out Snead By 2 Strokes

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 5 (AP).—A driving finish today earned Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., first prize money of $2000 in the $10,000 Tucson Open golf tournament.

Harper took birdies on the last three holes to card a score of 68 for the day and a total of 267 for the 72 holes of play. This was 13 under par for the El Rio 6402-yard layout.

At the start of the final nine holes Harper was two strokes back of Manuel de la Torre, the little known assistant pro from Glencoe, Ill.

Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., was three strokes back of de la Torre at the start of the final nine. The big-money winner from West Virginia finished with 269. This gave him second prize money of $1400.

De la Torre and United States Open champion, Cary Middlecoff, of Ormond Beach, Fla., finished with scored of 270 and earned $900 each for a third place tie. Jack Burke, jr., White Plains, N. Y., took a one-under-par 69 today and wound up with a total of 271.

The veteran Jim Ferrier, San Francisco, Calif., and Glenn Teal, Memphis, Tenn., finished one stroke back of Burke with totals of 272.

Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., who started out as a cofavorite with Snead to win top money, played the final round suffering from ptomaine poisoning. It was doubtful this morning whether he would be able to play. He finished the 18 holes in one-over-par 72 for a total of 273. He then was treated by a doctor before starting out for Texas. Grouped with Demaret at 273 were Wally Ulrich, Minneapolis, Minn., and Ralph Lomeli, Fresno, Calif.

The putting which yesterday allowed Harper to set a new PGA record of 21 putts for 18 holes stood him in good stead today. His drives were wild until he came to the eighteenth, when he needed a good one most. Then he hit what he called "my best drive of the tournament."

Ronzani Reported New Head Coach Of Green Bay

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Chicago Sun-Times said tonight that Gene Ronzani, Chicago Bear backfield tutor, has been named head coach of the Green Bay Packers, succeeding Curly Lambeau.

Neither Ronzani or Bear owner-coach George Halas were available tonight for comment.

The Sun-Times story, written by Gene Kessler, said it received its information from an "authoritative source in Green Bay." The official announcement was scheduled for Monday noon at Green Bay.

Joe Stydahar, former all-league tackle with the Bears who has been line coach of the Los Angeles Rams, will become Ronzani's first assistant, the newspaper said. A third change, it reported, will send Harry MacNamara, Chicago newspaperman, to Green Bay to suceed George Strickler as publicity director of the club.

Cards Open Season at Night

National Plays 205 P.M. Games

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—The National League has scheduled a record 205 night games for the 1950 baseball season with the St. Louis Cardinals leading the way with 80.

Besides playing more night games than any team in the majors, the Cards will become the first team in major league history to open the season at night.

The Red Birds are scheduled to entertain the Pittsburgh Pirates on the season's opening day, April 18. The other pairings for opening day are, Boston at New York, Brooklyn at Philadelphia and Chicago at Cincinnati.

St. Louis is down to play 54, 11 more than the Washington Nats, of its 77 home games at night and is scheduled for 26 after-dark tilts on foregn fields.

The Chicago Cubs, only team in the majors without lights, play more night games on the road than any other team, 29. Seven of these games are in St. Louis.

Last year the National League played 191 night games with the Cards leading th way with 71, including two ties. The Brooklyn Dodgers won the 1949 National League night game championship. The Brooks won 32 and lost 18 for a .640 mark. The Cards were next with 40 won, 29 lost and a .582 mark.

Since 1940 the night game schedule, inaugurated in the majors by the National League in 1935, has increased by leaps and bounds. Ten years ago only 81 games were played after the sun set in the National League which traces its start back to 1876.

The Boston Braves rank second to the Cards in night game play. The Braves have 60 games on tap, 37 at home and 23 away.

Following the Braves are the Philadelphia Phils with 53 games. The Phils will stage 30 at home and 23 on the road. The Cincinnati Reds are fourth with 51 games, including 24 at Crosley Field and 27 away.

Bjornstad Tops in Form And Distance

By Hugh Fullerton, jr.

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 5 (AP).—Hans Bjornstad, a 21-year-old Norwegian gardener, won the world ski jumping championship today with an amazing combination of distance and form. Bjornstad jumped 224 and 223 feet (68½ and 68 meters) on his two trials on the 65-meter Intervales Olympic Hill to score 220.4 points.

Bjornstad won by a margin of six points over Thure Lindgren, 28-year-old Swedish electrician, who had jumps of 218 and 214 feet (66½ and 65 meters) for a second place score of 214.4.

Rare Performance

The young Norwegian's performance was all the more remarkable for his great combination of form and distance and because he was a late addition to the team. He won his place on the squad at Skui, Norway, 10 days before it departed for America.

It is very rare in ski jumping for one man to get both the greatest distance and the top point score on form, but Bjornstad was easily the best in both respects today.

Arthur Devlin, Lake Placid, former United States ski champion, took sixth place to break into the Scandinavian monopoly of the leaders. Devlin had fine leaps of 220 and 219 feet, for 211 points.

Arnfinn Bergman of Norway was third with 213.5 points. Following him came Christian Mohn, Norway, 212.4; Torbjorn Falkanger, Norway, 211.9; Devlin, Petter Hugsted, Norway, 210.1; Georg Thrane, Norway, 207.9; Matti Pietikainen, 207.7 and Vidar Lindboe-Hansen, Norway, 206, tenth.

That gave the Norwegian team 7 of the first 10 places. Sweden, besides taking a surprising second place, took eleventh with Evert Karlsson, who scored an even 206 points.

Devlin's jumps of 220 and 219 feet (67 meters on each) left him behind only Bjornstad on distance. Pietikainen, the Finn who had one jump of 219 feet, also managed to break the Norwegian monopoly.

Both Bjornstad and Lindgren were in the "dark horse" category. Today's winner could place no better than fifth in last week's invitation jump, won by Mohn by a narrow margin over Bergman. Lindgren was thirty-first in that event.

Martin's Loses First Game in Soccer League

Pershing Mondorff made good on a penalty kick to give Marlboro the only point it needed to upset a previously undefeated Martin's Bakery team in a Washington and Suburban Soccer league game yesterday.

In another top game, the Maryland Sports Club held onto its leading position by edging the Order of the Sons of Italy in America, 2-1. O.S.I.A. led 1-0 at intermission but Bud and Bump Simonds scored for the Marylanders in the second half to take the decision.

Other games saw Gaithersburg nose out the Washington French, 3-2; Uncle Billies dqwned the Greek Americans, 2-0 and Charles County barely got past Indian Head, 2-0.

Charley Council Is Fitting Inspiration for Polio Victims

By Jules Loh

THERE IS plenty of running around done in badminton, which makes it a pretty tough game for a man with one leg four inches shorter than the other.

Council

Charley (C. R.) Council, the marvel who does it, was eliminated in the first round of the National Capital Badminton tournament out at Kensington Armory, but his handicap, he said, "had nothing to do with the loss." And it didn't.

He moves around the court with the agility of a first baseman, the finesse of a tennis star, and the coordination of a crack golfer.

And that's what Charley is—a first baseman, a tennis star and a crack golfer.

He licked an isolated case of polio down in his hometown of Raleigh, N. C., 32 years ago when he was 2; but only after the dread disease had left his leg shorter by four inches than his right.

During his high school days in Raleigh, he left the athletics mainly to the other kids. It was not until he went to Wake Forest University in 1932 that he began to seriously indulge in sports.

He took up the game of tennis and made the college team in his senior year. He only lost one match in college competition and he and his wife Frances have garnered 28 tennis trophies between them in the 11 years they have been married.

After he was graduated in 1936, he went back to Millbrook High School and taught English and geometry and was the basketball and baseball coach.

Immediately after his coaching days, he joined up with a semi-pro baseball team in the Neuse River League and led the league in batting with a .408 average in his first year.

But a summer of softball ruined his batting eye, so he hung up his first baseman's mitt for a while.

After office hours at the North Carolina State Board of Health at Raleigh, where he played a major part in helping to curb the 1948 polio epidemic, he shoots a game of golf in the very low 80s.

On days off, Charley gives voluntary service to the Recreation Department.

He loves work with kids and is chairman of the Junior Davis Cup tennis team in Raleigh and vice president of the recently organized North Carolina Tennis Association.

Loveday Upset By Stevens in Title Match

Clint Stevens of Baltimore scored a major upset when he defeated Carl Loveday, Montclair, N. J., sixth-ranked national badminton player, yesterday at the Kensington Armory for the National Capital Badminton championship.

Stevens came from behind to take the first set, 15—7 and then went on to win the second set, 15—7, without much trouble.

All-English champion, Marie Ussing of Copenhagen, Denmark, trounced Mrs. Patsy Stevens, 11—1, 11—3, to cop the crown in the ladies' singles; however, Mrs. Stevens teamed with Ruth Jett of Philadelphia to down Baltimore's young team of Judy and Sue Devlin, 15—5, 17—5, in the ladies' doubles.

Loveday and Fred Stieber of Baltimore easily won the men's doubles title over Harry Hackett of Philadelphia and Ken Kost of Westport, Conn., 15—3, 15—8.

In the mixed doubles, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens teamed up to trounce Mr. and Mrs. Joel Baker of Washington, 15—0, 15—7.

Coaltown Gets 132-Pound Load For Hialeah 'Cap

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5 (AP).—Calumet Farm's Coaltown, nominated for his first start of 1950, has been assigned top weight of 132 pounds for Hialeah Race Track's $25,000 McLennan Handicap Saturday.

Coaltown, which equalled the world record for the mile and a furlong at Hialeah last year, heads Calumet's ABC handicap team—Armed, Bewitch and Coaltown—in the richest race thus far this season.

Voted queen of the turf in 1949, Bewitch was given second-high impost of 117 pounds, same weight assigned to Mrs. E. L. Hopkins' Three Rings.

Armed, the grand 9-year-old gelding, was let into the mile and a furlong test with the comparatively light load of 112 pounds.

Central High School

Although the District School Board has put off its vote on whether to transfer Central High School to Negro use, there is good sense in the affirmative recommendation of its buildings and grounds committee. The basic argument is simply effective utilization of available space. Cardozo, an ancient Negro high school, is impossibly overcrowded and is operating on three shifts. The problem is immediate. The new Spingarn High School is two years away, and, even then, Spingarn alone would not relieve all the anticipated crowding; it would still be necessary to build a new Cardozo at a cost of some five million dollars. On the other hand, there is plenty of unused capacity in the white high schools to absorb students now using Central. Diversion of Central to Negro use also would lessen the jam in the junior high schools.

It is true that some white students would be inconvenienced by longer distances. There is also the possibility that this transfer would disrupt the building program and defer plans for a junior college—though we hope the School Board would still find the latter project possible. Nor can the sentimental attachment of Central High School alumni be ignored. However, as long as the District maintains the luxury of a dual school system, cold economics must prevail. Most of the headaches over crowding versus excess capacity would vanish, of course, if the District were to adopt an integrated system. Indianapolis and East St. Louis, to mention just two cities, have now successfully done away with segregated schools. Aside from other considerations, the soul-searching over the Central transfer ought to be the occasion for some hard thinking about the expense of duplicate schools in Washington.

CCC Surpluses

The cost to the Government of the millions of bushels of potatoes that the Department of Agriculture is planning to dump is a bagatelle compared with the cost of the immense stores of surplus cotton, grain, tobacco, eggs, butter and other products acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation under the price-support program. Last June the CCC's price-support inventories amounted to slightly more than a billion dollars. By next June they are expected to increase to 2.2 billion, owing chiefly to heavy purchases of corn, cotton, flaxseed and dairy products. By June, 1951, purchases made necessary by the large 1949 corn and cotton crops and the 1950 wheat crop will raise the inventory figure to an estimated three billion dollars.

The 1951 budgeted estimates of CCC expenditures are nearly 600 million dollars below the 1950 estimated outlays. President Truman, with his customary optimism, anticipates further declines in price-support expenditures in later years. But the CCC points out that numerous unpredictable factors, such as weather conditions, crop yields and foreign and domestic demand, as well as the level of domestic economic activity, affect price-support requirements and the amount of borrowing authority required to assure a sufficiency of funds to operate the program. Consequently, the CCC is asking for an increase of two billion dollars in its borrowing authority (the present limit is 4.75 billion dollars) to finance operations in the next fiscal year. This is a huge sum, but none too large in view of the obligations, actual and prospective, incurred by the CCC in carrying out legislative mandates.

In his budget message President Truman referred to the CCC inventories as assets providing insurance against possible crop shortages in future years. However, he ignored the fact that some of the stored commodities, eggs and butter, for instance, are deteriorating rapidly and, like potatoes, may have to be dumped. Moreover, a crop failure of the extent required to provide a market for the seven million bales of cotton that the CCC may own by next fall would be a major catastrophe, having a depressing effect on industry as well as agriculture.

"Historically," the CCC says, "the major portion of loans made or guaranteed have been repaid by producers, and the major portions of commodities purchased or obtained in settlement of loans have been sold into export or domestic channels. The true measure of the cost of the corporation's activities, then, is the losses sustained rather than the amount of guarantees and investments made." Although that is true, the appeal to history is far from reassuring. For the CCC was loaded down at the beginning of the forties with surplus commodities that would have been unsalable but for the war. With the scale of support operations steadily expanding in the postwar years, following declines in abnormally high demands for agricultural products, the chances are that the CCC will be appealing to Congress for more billions next year to add to its crop surpluses. The remedy obviously lies in abandonment of the present system of high price supports that results in overproduction of some crops and wasteful utilization of land and labor at the expense of taxpayers and consumers.

Coal Crisis

By rejecting the President's proposal to submit the coal dispute to a fact-finding board, with power to recommend terms of settlement, John L. Lewis runs true to form. For it is his custom to dictate terms, not to negotiate contracts. Since fact-finding boards make suggestions for compromising disputes, Mr. Lewis, quite understandably, regards the whole fact-finding procedure as unwarranted interference with union prerogatives and a waste of time.

Moreover, if the miners were to reject the recommendations of a fact-finding board—and Mr. Lewis assumes that they would be unacceptable—the President could, if necessary, invoke the emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act at the end of the 70-day voluntary period of full-time work, during which the board would have been investigating the dispute. Meantime coal piles would have been replenished, fuel demands would have declined and the operators would be in a stronger bargaining position. We strongly suspect, therefore, that Mr. Lewis would welcome an immediate test of the efficacy of the Taft-Hartley Act as an alternative to a delaying procedure that would undermine his powers of coercion, despite his vituperative references to the "oppressive legal sanctions of Taft's bill of attainder against labor unions."

In his letter to the President Mr. Lewis strongly hints that striking miners might either refuse to obey a court order to return to work or else stage a slowdown. Since his suggestion that the men now on strike return to the three-day work week has been ignored, he might disavow personal and union responsibility for any subsequent strikes in defiance of a court injunction claiming that they were unorganized demonstrations by individuals entitled to work, or not, as they chose. Two years ago Mr. Lewis refused to obey an injunction to order the miners to return to work for similar reasons. But he was overruled in the courts, and both he and the union were heavily fined. Differences of opinion exist as to whether he is still able to control the actions of the miners, some of whom are striking in disregard of his advice. So there is a possibility, though it seems unlikely, that a Taft-Hartley injunction might prove ineffective as a means of ending the coal crisis.

Even if the strike threat materializes and work is resumed under compulsion there is no reason to suppose that the operators and the union would be any nearer a settlement of the issues in dispute at the end of an 80-day injunction. Collective bargaining by its very nature requires that the parties make concessions. In the coal industry true collective bargaining has become impossible, because Mr. Lewis lays down the terms of settlement before he begins to bargain. Temporary injunctions are patently an ineffective means of dealing with the emergencies resulting from a labor dictatorship of this kind that keeps the coal industry in a state of constant turmoil and inflicts hardships on the miners, the mine owners and the general public.

The only way to curb despotic abuse of power by labor leaders like John L. Lewis is to strengthen the labor laws, possibly by outlawing strikes that give rise to or threaten to create national emergencies. Or, as we said recently: "If no sound statute can be devised to prevent the crippling of our national economy for the advantage of strategically placed labor groups, the only alternative may be to outlaw industry-wide bargaining."

Truman Tax Program

The Administration's tax program is a jerry-built affair that would make the Federal tax structure more inequitable than it now is. For only a few of the wartime excises would be reduced, although equally strong arguments exist for giving tax relief to a number of other industries subject to such taxes. The recommendations for closing loopholes in the income-tax laws are also arbitrarily selective in character. For instance, the Administration indorses taxation of businesses operated by charitable and educational establishments, but makes no mention of the favored-tax treatment accorded farmers' cooperatives engaged in business operations that bring them into competition with taxed concerns.

The so-called notch rate of 53 percent levied on corporations with net incomes between $25,000 and $50,000 should be eliminated, as recommended, since it is obviously inequitable to tax profits in this bracket at rates much higher than those above or below it. However, the abolition of this minor inequity will not compensate for the major inequity of a proposed increase of about 675 million dollars in the taxes levied on a comparatively few large corporations. The present high level of corporation taxes can be justified only by the high level of Government expenditures. They are a drag on enterprise that emphasizes the need for tax relief rather than higher taxes on industry. Especially is there need for abolition of the double taxation resulting from the levies on both corporate profits and income from dividends. To sum up: the Administration's tax program would eliminate only a few of the inequities that call for remedial action and at the same time would result in the imposition of additional tax burdens equally oppressive—certainly more sweeping in their incidence.

While Congress is evidently eager to reduce excise taxes and may be willing to make up for consequent revenue losses by closing some of the loopholes in the tax laws, we doubt that it will vote for tax increases in an election year. For that reason, apart from economic objections, the Administration proposals appear to be ill-advised and ill-timed. Congress could most effectively narrow the gap between outgo and income by a vigorous economy drive, eliminating waste and curtailing the scope of new spending projects. What the country needs, in short, is a reduction in the size of the Administration's spending program instead of higher taxes on industry that would retard economic expansion. It will not get it, unless Congress takes the initiative.

Virginia's Schools

It is good news when anyone does something about inadequate schools. Thus there is considerable reason to be pleased over the vote of the Virginia General Assembly to grant counties and cities 45 million dollars in school construction funds. This amounts to a redemption of the first pledge of Gov. John S. Battle. It also is a tacit confirmation of the point raised last year by the Fairfax County School Emergency Committee when it asserted that the State had a substantial kitty in tax surpluses and unexpended capital appropriations which could be diverted to the school emergency. Apparently the Democratic organization sensed the ground swell of sentiment for schools.

But while the 45-million-dollar grant will help some of the critical situations, the wisdom of this kind of grant is open to serious question. Distribution to localities on the basis of school membership makes no distinction as to degrees of need. The requirement of local matching funds, recommended by the Tax Study Commission and plugged unsuccessfully by several delegates, would have introduced the necessary principle of self-help. Even that formula, however, would not have recognized the fact that some counties have virtually exhausted their funds in providing for schools while others have done precious little.

In other words, under either the arrangement now voted or the matching fund scheme by itself, some counties would receive a windfall whereas others would not get enough for their real needs despite the so-called "equalization" fund. Any scientific distribution of aid funds, it seems to us, would be based on much more complex factors, including such things as county tax rates and the proportion of county revenues going to schools. It is more than possible that the gift precedent established in the present grant will, as Delegate Robert Whitehead put it, "rise like Banquo's ghost to haunt every man who starts it."

Candidate At 86

Representative Robert L. Doughton of Sparta, N. C., says at the ripe age of 86 that he is homesick. Apparently he would like to retire. But he has decided to stand for election for the twentieth time, because, as he puts it, "people from all over the State tell me it is my duty to run again." Coming from an ambitious young politician of half the veteran North Carolinian's age, this statement could be interpreted as hyperbole, meaning that he had decided to make another desperate fight for the nomination. But in Mr. Doughton's case we suspect it is an understatement.

This newspaper has special reasons to know that Mr. Doughton is a man in whom North Carolina is well pleased. Last November we had the temerity to suggest, in congratulating Mr. Doughton on his eighty-sixth birthday, that Congress should no longer keep a man of his age in the chairmanship of one of its most powerful committees—Ways and Means. There was nothing personal in the comment. Our target was only the discredited seniority rule, which keeps the oldest member of a congressional committee (in point of service) at its head regardless of whether his strength is equal to the task. But that didn't save us. We were almost mobbed by irate North Carolinians. Having finally emerged from that avalanche of protests, we can testify that the Ninth District of North Carolina wants Mr. Doughton in the House, and, of course, the whole point in having an election is to give the people what they want.

Naturalization

It is a misfortune that Senator Russell saw fit last week to object to Senate action on a joint resolution unanimously adopted by the House and unanimously approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee to remove racial restrictions from the privilege of becoming a naturalized citizen of the United States. This resolution, which would not in any way affect immigration, is designed simply to permit naturalization of about 90,000 resident aliens of Japanese and Korean descent. Since the Immigration Act of 1924 prohibits entry of Asiatics for permanent residence after July 1 of that year, these persons must have been resident in the United States for at least 25 years, with the majority having been here 35 years or more. They have had a record of loyalty and devotion to their adopted country. Ninety percent of them had sons in the armed services during the war. The restriction on their naturalization is an injustice to them and an ugly expression of racism. Surely Mr. Russell's lone objection to an act of such simple equity must rest upon a misapprehension. We hope that his objection will be withdrawn so that the measure can pass the Senate by unanimous consent.

Juvenile Violence

It is shocking to learn of behavior of young delinquents at Banneker Junior High School. It is more shocking to realize that bad conditions exist also in some other schools in Washington and in other American cities. I was recently horrified to learn that a frail 6-year-old boy of my own neighborhood was afraid to stay at school for his lunch because of the danger of receiving bloody bruises from more vigorous contemporaries.

The need for more police protection and for more work by youth organizations (as pointed out in The Washington Post of January 20) is obvious. But it is to be hoped that efforts to improve the behavior of juvenile delinquents will not be limited to those two means. One approach to the study of the causes of delinquency should be a consideration of the type of moving pictures which our children see. Today's children are introduced at an early age to overstimulating adult movies, many of which concern crime.

"Electoral College"

The Lodge-Gossett resolution is not the answer to the problem of presidential election reform. It implies that the right to vote is substantially the same in all States. However, it is well known that in many States—Representative Gossett's State of Texas is one of them—the right to vote is denied to many citizens.

A State's electoral votes are not reduced even though only a small fraction of citizens are actually able to vote. Thus it takes many more Ohio or New York votes to count for one electoral vote than it does in Alabama or Texas. This evil is counterbalanced to some extent by the fact that under the present system New York, Ohio and similar States retain considerable influence because of the bloc nature of counting the electoral vote.

Should the Lodge-Gossett resolution pass, the influence of these States on the outcome of a presidential election would be greatly reduced, as you ably stated editorially on January 28. But you neglected to state that at the same time a new and greater evil would arise—the increased influence of any State or group of States which chose to restrict or limit the right of its citizens to vote.

The great evil here referred to could be avoided if electoral votes were assigned to the States on the basis of votes actually cast in an election or upon direct popular vote.

Cake Or Cooking?

I do not customarily write letters to newspapers; for free, that is. But Malvina Lindsay has worn me down. On February 1, for the third time in recent weeks, she has misquoted with unconscious humor, an extraordinarily expressive German phrase—expressive, that is, when it is used accurately.

Miss Lindsay keeps on talking about kuchen, kinder and (und) kirche, in reference to a traditional attitude toward womenfolk.

What she really means is kinder, kuche, kirche.

The way she insists on it, the phrase reads "cake, children, and church." Kuchen is delightful—especially if it's the thin sugar and cinnamon variety such as Aunt Sophie used to make—but it doesn't make much sense in Miss Lindsay's editorial context.

Captive Audiences

A lot of drivel has been written about "captive audiences" with reference to the radio in buses. Why is an audience that has to listen to a radio any more "captive" than one that has to read card ads in the buses about undertakers, Government bonds, beauty lotions, etc? It is impossible to stand in a bus without these ads staring one in the face, and the only way not to read them is to forget how to read.

If they take out the radios, which are a welcome relief from the unmitigated boredom of riding on buses, let's make them take out the advertisements, too. If I have a choice between listening to music or news or advertising announcements, and listening to Gertie Katzenhoople talk about last night's date, or two Government employes talking about their boss, I'll take the radio.

F. S. WILSON.
Chevy Chase

Unfortunately R. V. A. (letter published January 25) has hypnotized himself along with a covey of hysteria-prone others by his own scare words of "captive audience" and has magnified the issue out of all proportion. What he refuses to recognize is that transit radio is a new business created by free private enterprise and creating new jobs and new markets without seriously hurting existing businesses.

Since opinion polls are a questionable means of determining the public's opinion in the matter, I suggest that on a certain day small ballots be given to all transit riders to be marked, dropped in the fare boxes, and counted by an appointed committee. Then when the issue is decided I suggest that the opponents of transit radio enter the fight for local suffrage with the same vigor they have given to this side issue.

How To Make Tea

A sense of hopelessness, a moment of dark depression, must have overcome your British readers when they encountered your February 1 editorial, "Tea Armistice."

I do not, of course, presume to criticize Mr. Charles Hutchinson, chief examiner of the United States Board of Tea Examiners, if (as you state) he is proposing to pour boiling water through tea-leaves which have been lodged in an aluminum strainer placed across the top of the pot. It would no doubt be highly improper for a Briton to comment on the forthcoming tea standards ceremony in New York, and nothing would induce me to offer any observations upon the tea-making technique there, unless it were to recall that in parts of West Africa medicine-men sometimes attempt to cure toothache by beating the sufferer over the head with a ju-ju stick, and to reflect that customs vary a good deal in different parts of the world.

It is when you say that "some Britishers will object vehemently to the aluminum tea-strainer, insisting upon fine gauze" that my blood runs really cold. I have read the sentence several times and it still seems to indicate that there must lurk in the mind of your editorial writer the notion that the British put their tea in strainers of fine gauze. The discovery of any Briton who made his tea that way would be an occasion in my country for national mourning.

It is true that since the beginning of the war, which brought about the rationing of tea in Britain, some highly unorthodox practices have developed among the citizenry. The adult members of my own family get along with 18 cups of tea each a day, but there are many people who drink a lot of tea, and the present tea ration (2½ ounces per person per week, or 3 ouncer if you're over 70) thus has to be eked out by devices which are regarded with misgivings by the best minds in the nation.

There is a school, for example, which argues that it is better to use a large teapot and to add fresh spoonfuls to the used tea leaves in the bottom, until the pot is about half full of leaves. These are thrown out—not without a pang—every Saturday afternoon, and a fresh start is then made. Another school considers that the ultimate value can best be extracted from the tea by putting it into the kettle with the cold water and letting it stew for an hour or two over a slow fire.

I want to be completely fair, and I must concede to your editorial writer that on wayside stands, cafes and in some of the rougher and readier canteens in Britain there are occasionally to be found large urns containing boiling water into which tea tied up in a coarse cotton bag is lowered on the end of a bit of string. This is done in order that the girl who is dispensing the tea—she is usually called Gertie, or sometimes Flo—will not be put to the trouble of cleaning the leaves out of the urn at the end of her working day.

These are reprehensible departures from the normal, and right-minded, thinking Britons deplore them. But at their worst they have this virtue: they do produce a liquid the color and taste of which make it readily distinguishable from rainwater.

The most vicious tea-making techniques stop short of anything that would bring about such a debilitated brew as is concocted by the emersion of a tea-bag in a cup of luke-warm water, or indeed by the pouring of boiling water through aluminum or gauze strainers.

The way to make tea, sir, is to put into a teapot a spoonful of tea for each person and one for the pot, and then to pour boiling water on top of it, give it a stir, and replace the teapot lid. How can you put the teapot lid on if there's a strainer or some such foolishness in the way? How can you expect good tea if the lid isn't on?

There are some refinements, like swilling out the pot with boiling water before you put the tea in, and always carrying the pot to the kettle and never the kettle to the pot. There is a theory, to which I am inclined myself, that you get a riper tipple in less time if you drop half a teaspoonful of sugar into the pot with the dry tea.

There was a distressing hint in your editorial I thought of a disposition to look upon a man who takes his tea seriously as a chauvinist. I prefer to approach the question on a higher plane. The new arrangements for the sharing of know-how among the free peoples represent one of the most enlightened movements of the times. To such a movement I should be happy to make even the most humble contribution.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Headwaters

GREAT EVENTS are like great rivers. The headwaters are many, various and far apart. No one can foretell the course of the Mississippi from the shape of a spring freshet in the Dakotas. Yet when all the brooks are full and running hard, one can foresee that somewhere a river will receive the waters, and somehow carry them down to the sea.

In the same fashion, it begins to be possible to foresee a great event here in Washington—nothing less than a sharp change in the whole tempo, scope and plan of basic American policy.

What has been happening, in effect, is the rapid collapse of all the assumptions on which policy has been based since the 1948 election. There have been three of these assumptions: (1) That the Soviet Union wished to achieve its aims by the peaceful conquest of infiltration; (2) that the American monopoly on atomic weapons would continue to operate as a final safeguard against Soviet aggression; (3) that there was, therefore, all the time in the world to win the cold war.

ON THESE ASSUMPTIONS, as soon as the 1948 election gave him the self-confidence to do so, President Truman imposed a drastic slowdown on defense and foreign policy. Since then, the needs of foreign policy have been continuously subordinated to domestic politics. Since then, the needs of defense-planning have been progressively sacrificed to the problem of the budget. The keynote has been the President's favorite phrase, "everything's going to be all right."

Many leaders of the Administration still cherish this curious conviction. Secretary of the Treasury Snyder and Secretary of Commerce Sawyer are still wedded to business-as-usual. Secretary of Defense Johnson is still capable of declaring that we can "lick hell out of Joe Stalin," the next day after his own Secretary for Air, Stuart Symington, told another audience that the Russians are now more powerful than we are in every military arm.

Indeed, it is only at the State Department that the signs of change are visible as yet. And it is only in the State Department that the great change can originate.

If it is permissible to hazard a guess, Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson, who is devotedly loyal to the President, took office with the determination to go along with Truman on the defense and foreign policy slowdown. Certainly this was the original approach of Undersecretary of State James Webb, who as Budget Director was one of the slowdown's first advocates.

If one may guess further, what has happened at the State Department is that events—all the hard, hurrying, terrifying happenings of the past 14 months—have simply been too much for Acheson and Webb and their coworkers. Events have in fact insistently demanded, not less, but far greater American efforts on almost every front.

Above all, events have disappointed the original hope of Acheson and his coworkers that 10 or 20 years would elapse before the cold war reached the stage of crisis. On the contrary, almost every problem, whether in the Far East, or in Europe, or in the sphere of policy best symbolized by the hydrogen bomb, has moved toward the stage of crisis with unrelenting speed.

Symptomatic was the recent report of High Commissioner John J. McCloy, who warned that the German problem must be settled within 18 months, if the West Germans were to be surely prevented from moving toward the Soviet sphere. The new keynote, indeed, might be the exquisite passage from Ecclesiastes that McCloy took as his text:

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven. A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted; a time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up. . ."

THE REASONS why this time is a "time to act" are only too obvious. For many months the Western confederation has been progressively weakening, while the Soviet empire has been rapidly consolidated, expanded and rearmed. Very recently, by taking such crucial steps as the current preparations to give open support to the Communists in Indo-China, the Kremlin has begun to imitate the behavior of Hitler in his mid-career. And now the world is haunted with the dreadful specter of the hydrogen bomb.

According to highest authority, moreover, the hydrogen bomb problem has finally caused the President to ask Secretary Acheson to review and reassess the whole panorama of American policy and effort. The outcome of this review and reassessment can hardly be predicted with precision. Yet if Acheson concludes that no world settlement can be negotiated with the Kremlin, one thing at least seems sure. The cold war will at last be recognized for what it is—a real war, even although no shots are being fired, with all a real war's first calls on resources, manpower and national effort. Except surrender, there is no other way.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The McMahon Proposals

"I SUPPOSE," said Senator McMahon towards the close of his poignant address, "that my proposals will be termed impractical or theoretical in some quarters." Unfortunately they are impractical. That is not because they are generous in their purpose and conception but because the Senator has not done what he set out to do. He has not made "a fresh proposal for atomic peace." What he has done is to offer 50 billion dollars to the world, including Russia, if the Soviet Union will accept the obsolete Baruch plan.

Senator McMahon seems not to have realized that the Baruch plan, as well as the report of the Acheson-Lilienthal board which preceded it, was a miscalculation based on misinformation about the progress of Russia in the field of atomic energy. The American plan of 1946-1947 rested on what we now know to have been a complete fallacy—namely that the United States had a monopoly of the technical processes and means of producing nuclear fuels.

SPEAKING of the Baruch plan on Thursday, Senator McMahon described it as follows: "We proposed that men of all countries, including Russians, come to America under the auspices of the United Nations and inspect our atomic activities and share in the control of our atomic raw materials and the operation of our atomic plants." When we made that offer we were supposing, quite mistakenly, that we alone had atomic activities to inspect, atomic raw materials to control and to share, and atomic plants in operation. All the terms and conditions attached to the Baruch offer assumed that we had such a monopoly, and that if the Russians did not accept the terms and conditions, we would retain the monopoly of the bomb for many years to come and that the Russians would not have the bomb for many years to come.

The Russians achieved the bomb within two years of Mr. Baruch's proposal, and therefore while he was talking, the Russians not only knew all the scientific secrets but were also well along in the process of mining, refining and manufacturing. Thus Mr. Baruch was trying to sell Mr. Gromyko a scheme to share the American monopoly when in fact Mr. Gromyko knew with reasonable certainty that the end of the American monopoly was in sight. Mr. Gromyko did not accept the Baruch offer because he did not have to. He held very much stronger cards than Mr. Baruch thought he held.

IN 1946 when the Acheson-Lilienthal board made its report, in 1947 when Mr. Baruch made his proposal, in 1948 and 1949 up to the time when the atomic explosion was detonated in Russia, the worst that could be said of our American policy—as we look back upon it now—is that it was based on misinformation.

But I do not understand how Senator McMahon, who has lived and suffered with this whole subject, should still be talking about the Baruch plan as if it were alive, living, and real, needing only the "re-evaluating" of "certain technical phases,"—that he should still believe today, when he knows what no one in this country knew in 1947 about the Russian progress in atomic energy, that this plan based on an American monopoly can still be applied when there is no monopoly.

IS IT NOT self-evident that if we wish to make proposals for atomic peace, while we are involved unavoidably in a race of atomic armaments, then the Acheson-Lilienthal board, or something like it, must be reconvened—and the whole problem reexamined in the light of what has happened since 1946 and in the light of what we know now that we did not know then? It really is not good enough for us to stand before the world and our own consciences on a plan and a policy which are manifestly and demonstrably obsolete and impracticable.

No offer of money, no protestations of our good faith, no beating of our breasts about the horrors of the hell-bomb, will be a substitute for a deep effort of mind to think out fresh proposals based on the actual fact that now there are two atomic powers in the world, and no longer only one. If we persist in saying that the old plan is still our plan, we shall now lay ourselves wide open to the charge, not only from the Russians but from our friends all over the world, that we are not seriously interested in any plan.

WHAT Mr. McMahon really wants, all but the criminally foolish want also. But fervor, sincerity, anxiety, and generosity are not enough; there is needed also the humility to recognize an error and the resolution to repair it. I venture to believe that nothing would accomplish so much to restore the confidence of mankind as a statement by the President that he had not only instructed the Atomic Energy Commission to proceed with the hydrogen bomb but that he had also instructed the Secretary of State to institute a new inquiry into the American policy and the American proposals.

This would be a simple admission that the United States was seeking a new policy in a radically new situation. That admission would revive hope and open the minds of men, now frozen in the awful realization that we have nothing to offer except an obsolete plan to deal with the new horrors to which we are committed.

result from a settlement of a new contract.

"The publishers asked for a wage reduction conditioned on improvements in certain restrictions contained in the present agreement, some of which have been recognized as being unduly burdensome in other contracts currently approved by the International Typographical Union.

"Nevertheless, after 20 meetings, the publishers have indicated a willingness to place on the table a proposition of status quo on the economic provisions of the present agreement, plus a graduated third week of vacation after two years. Furthermore, the publishers have reduced their demands to a request that, with proper safeguards of the union's jurisdiction, they be relieved of the necessity of employing journeymen in the operation of proof pressing.

"The publishers believe that this proposal goes beyond what reasonably might be expected and what prudent management requires. Nevertheless, it is offered by the publishers as evidence of their sincere desire for continuance of the friendly relations which have existed with Columbia Typographical Union over the years."

The local union, which represents some 650 composing room employes on the four newspapers, has asked a third week of vacations after one year of employment. Other proposals included a reduction in the third shift work week from 35 to 30 hours, and other improvements.

O'Connor said last night that an actual strike vote by the local would receive just as heavy backing as yesterday's strike authorization vote. He said he warned the membership at yesterday's meeting that those who voted "aye" on strike authorization must vote the same way in a vote to begin a strike.

23-Week Strike Is Settled At Smoot Sand and Gravel

according to Holden, who was designated to announce the settlement.

No wage increase was included in the agreement which was announced, but the company agreed to hire its employes on a year-round basis, and to adjust "pay inequities" in several classifications. A cost of living bonus was also provided.

Vacations and Christmas holiday rights will not be affected by the strike, according to the agreement. The new work contract will be effective until August 29, 1951, two years from the date of expiration of the previous contract.

The unions involved, Local 77 of the International Union of Operating Engineers and Local 639 of the Teamsters Union, both AFL, originally asked for wage increases of 25 cents an hour.

Holden brought the parties together last Thursday after more than a month without negotiations. The talks were continued Friday and Saturday, when an agreement was reached subject to union ratification. Ratification was voted yesterday.

The Smoot company, which dredges and hauls most of its sand and gravel from both banks of the Potomac River between Alexandria and Mount Vernon, Va., ordinarily supplies the bulk of the material used by ready-mix concrete contractors in the Washington area.

After some delay, eight smaller sand and gravel companies in nearby Maryland and Virginia have managed to fill the needs of the area, but it was feared that a cold spell might cut off this supply.

A spokesman for the construction industry estimated yesterday that costs of hauling the sand and gravel from outside have run about $75,000 a month. The extra expense has been borne by the ready-mix contractors here, he explained, because they have firm contracts to supply concrete at a stated price.

Holden said the insurance fund to be set up by the company is intended to include life insurance, benefits for sickness, accidents, hospitalization and medical and surgical benefits, as well as accidental death and dismemberment provisions.

The fund, to be financed by quarterly contributions by the company amounting to 3 percent of pay rolls, will be administered by a board of trustees consisting of two men appointed by the company, two named by the union, and a fifth disinterested member to be selected by the other four members. Details will be worked out by the trustees.

A cost of living bonus, whose amount was not announced, will be paid by the company in April of this year, according to the agreement. Another such bonus will be paid in July, 1951, if the cost of living has risen between the two dates.

The employes involved in the strike were about 120 operating engineers, including crew men such as dredge, tug and barge operators, as well as shipyard mechanics, welders and crane operators, and about 40 members of the Teamsters Union, who work as truck drivers, warehousemen and helpers. During negotiation sessions, union spokesmen said wages ranged from 58 cents to $1.32 an hour.

VA to Start Tightening Up On GI Education Regulations

By The Associated Press

The Veterans Administration is about to make a start on the six-year job of shutting down the veterans training and education program.

That part of the GI Bill expires in 1956. Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., has informed Congress a regulation coming out April 1 will say that—with certain exceptions — veterans may not enter the training program after July 25, 1951.

Furthermore, after that date:

1. Veterans may change courses of instruction "only for the most cogent reasons." Veterans now may change courses fairly easily, usually after seeking counseling and guidance service.

2. Once a veteran completes a course he will not be able to enroll in another even though he may still have some school time left under the GI Bill formula.

The new rules are intended to carry out terms of the Veterans Readjustment Act specifying that a veteran must start his course within four years after the date of discharge or after July 25, 1947, the official termination of the war.

The 1951 deadline will not affect the approximately one million veterans who enlisted or reenlisted under the Armed Forces Recruitment Acts of 1945 and 1946 and those veterans who have been discharged since July 25, 1947, or who are still in service.

The Veterans Administration said more than 15 million veterans are eligible for training under the GI Bill with the average amount of entitlement being 40 months.

The agency estimates the minimum cost of the remaining part of the training program at 16 million dollars. It says that if 15 million veterans each take 40 months of training at an average cost to the Government of $100 a month, the cost of the program could be 60 billion dollars.

But Gray said the best estimate indicates the cost of the project from its start to its end in 1956 may range between 25 billion and 30 billion dollars.

Veterans get subsistence payments of $65 to $95 in job training and $75 to $120 a month in school, in adition to tuition, free books and other benefits.

The Veterans Administration has asked for $2,690,000,000 for education and training in the fiscal year 1950-1951.

Heart Society To Open Serics Of Meetings

The Washington Heart Association this week will initiate a series of monthly meetings on heart and circulatory diseases.

Dr. William D. Stroud, professor of cardiology at the University of Pennsylvania, will speak at the opening meeting at 8:15 p. m., Wednesday, at the District Medical Society building, 1718 M st. nw.

Announcement of the special series was made by Dr. Hugh Hussey, chairman of the heart association's scientific council. The program, he said, is designed to expand professional education in the field of cardiovascular diseases.

Wednesday's tmeeting, Dr. Hussey said, will also honor Dr. Thomas S. Lee, professor of cardiology at Georgetown University Medical School. Dr. Lee, instrumental in founding the organization 25 years ago, will be presented with a scroll announcing his appointment as honorary president of the Washington Heart Association.

Crushing of Red Plot Reported by Bolivia

La Paz, Bolivia, Feb. 5 (U.P.)—Police announced today that a Communist plot to "attack" Bolivia's electric power and food supplies had been crushed by the arrest of an undisclosed number of persons.

An official announcement said the persons arrested included seven foreign Communists and 15 persons who recently raided a collective market.

County Chiefs Outline Work Under Charter

Montgomery County's charter regime has nearly completed basic work for the new government and now is ready for more active service.

Frederic P. Lee, president of the Montgomery Council, made this statement over WGAY yesterday in a broadcast outlining the first year's activity of the council.

Lee said most of the year was devoted to reorganizing the governmental structure of the county, ridding the books of obsolete laws and enacting new laws to meet modern requirements.

Forgotten Ordinance

He said the three lawyers now employed by the county are codifying the laws, including musty, forgotten ordinances on the minutes of the commissioners.

President Lee said his associates have done a good job at not only 107 official council meetings but in a number of other meetings required by the heavy load of organization.

Hope To Do Better

"I think we have done more than any other county government," Lee said, "but naturally we are not satisfied. We hope to do even a better job in the next year."

Other members of the council spoke briefly and gave short resumes of accomplishments and plans. They included Dr. Lewis Meriam, Augustus R. Selby, J. Douglas Bradshaw, Mrs. Dorothy Himstead, Thomas E. Kelley and P. G. Ligon.

a square deal." The Wagner Act, he said, was not a "square deal."

Already on record behind Governor Duff are Governors Fred G. Aandahl of North Dakota, Sherman Adams of New Hampshire, William S. Beardsley of Iowa, Val Peterson of Nebraska, and C. A. Robins of Idaho. Governor Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey indorsed the proposal at a press conference here last week.

Generally, Republican Governors advised party members to get to work campaigning. They branded the Brannan plan as dangerous and generally urged a sound Federal fiscal policy. All said they were concerned over the high cost of Government and Federal waste and extravagance, according to a newspaper.

Among typical comments were those of Governor Frederick C. Payne of Maine, who said, "Such an approach is constructive and will appeal to the people as the type of government desired by the majority."

Governor Duff has urged the party to be constructive, but not initiative or negative. He advised policy makers to spotlight attention for the campaigns on a few important issues. Above all, he urged a liberal program.

Governor Earl Warren of California, Republican vice presidential candidate in 1948, asked the Bulletin for more time to study the Duff demand.

strikes swell to 100,000 men—one fourth of the Lewis work force in the soft coal mines—after a period of three-day work weeks decreed by Lewis had succeeded in cutting deep into the Nation's coal supplies to give him a better bargaining position.

Lewis had "suggested" the men stay on the job, but this met defiance from the diggers who fell back on their traditional "no contract-no work" stand.

Halleck Criticizes President

Mr. Truman's handling of the situation drew new criticism yesterday. Representative Charles Halleck (R., Ind.) said Mr. Truman had shown disrespect and contempt for the law and had blocked "all efforts to improve" it.

If the law is invoked the miners should go back to work, Halleck said, but he added that "the President has not set an example which would encourage them to return to the pits."

If an injunction is granted, the inquiry board, at the end of 60 days, would take another look at the situation. In the following 20 days, the National Labor Relations Board would poll the miners on the operators' last offer, and the Attorney General would then ask the court to dissolve the injunction.

If a strike broke out anew, Mr. Truman could then submit the whole matter to Congress.

raisers leeway similar to that granted cotton.

If the cotton bill "comes to the floor of the Senate in the same shape it left the House," Anderson, "it will contain a provision which alone will add 1,400,000 acres, and a second provision, which I regard as a wide-open invitation to increase other limitations on cotton acreage by permitting the committees in various States to review the cases and open up the situation as to individual farms.

"In my opinion the passage of the bill in that form could easily give us 2,500,000 acres of additional cotton in a year when we will produce at least 1½ million bales more than we can possibly use.

"Those additional two or two and a half million acres could give us another one and a half million bales of cotton. We do not need those extra million bales of cotton. If we hold that legislation down to reasonable limits, which will correct inequities and not go as far as I think the House has gone—and I think it has gone too far—then I think we shall perform a very useful service.

"The statement was made on the floor of the House that not only was this measure designed to correct inequities so far as cotton and peanuts were concerned, but that when the wheat and corn growers came in they would be taken care of too.

"The whole basis upon which the pressure was on for high levels of price supports this year was that we were reducing acreage on every crop, and that therefore we had to give the producers high income for one more year in order to permit a gradual readjustment.

"If we proceed to give away all we gain by acreage limitations and have high prices too, then those high prices serve as incentives to production, and we get far more of the crop than we can possibly take care of."

Strachey Boasts Income-Leveling

Dundee, Scotland, Feb. 5 (AP).—Only 250 persons in Great Britain have spendable incomes of more than £5000 ($14,000) a year after they have paid taxes, Labor Food Minister John Strachey said in a political address tonight.

Before the war, he said, 11,000 persons topped the £5000 mark. He regarded the leveling of incomes an outstanding Socialist achievement, saying: "The redistribution of incomes within the community was the most important step of all. Redistribution has gone farther than many people realize."

One on the Aisle—

Queen Ethel Likes Sen. Douglas' Voice

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT MANHATTAN: Almost reluctantly, Ethel Barrymore sets off from Grand Central for that Hollywood sunshine that's made her a Californian . . . Still glowing from her "ANTA Album" triumph, she tells ANTA Executive Robert Breen, "just ask me to come back. I'll come" . . . Breen points out that some 40,000 were turned away from the Ziegfeld Theater performance, that it would be great to repeat the Album in the spring, both in New York and Washington, if ANTA can get a Capital showcase by then, but that it wouldn't be the 1950 Album without Queen Ethel . . . "You plan on those performances," Miss Barrymore replies. "I'll come East and be proud to do it and, as for Washington, I think it's a crime that it's without a theater. ANTA must get a theater there and if you do open it with an 'Album' performance, include me in" . . . Appraised of Senator Douglas' role in the effort to get a theater open in Washington, the famed Barrymore tones chuckle: "Now there's a man with a wonderful voice, that Senator Douglas. You tell him I like his voice."

ALEC GUINESS, the highly regarded British actor making his bow in T. S. Eliot's "The Cocktail Party," is in the curious position of having had his two top film roles unseen in this country . . . Pressure from one source has kept "Oliver Twist" and his Fagin from being shown in this land of the free and now the Breen office is turning thumbs down on the Ealing Studio comedy, "Kind Hearts and Coronets." . . . This one is about a looney who, nine steps away from the noble title of his far-flung family, murders each one in turn . . . Guiness plays all nine victims in a brilliant tour-de-force, but the Breen outfit says murder isn't funny, forgetting "Arsenic and Old Lace" . . . Guiness is too diplomatic to refer to this curious reasoning in our free land, but he can't keep an American from wondering how come Mr. Breen so presumes.

GILBERT MILLER, who brought "The Cocktail Party" from England and set it up in his own Henry Miller theater, says this is the biggest hit he's ever had, including "Victoria Regina." . . . "We began with the usual two treasurers in the box office. The day after the notices came out, we had to add a third and Monday morning we're putting on a fourth to take care of the sweep of mail orders." . . . Verse plays are dearest to the heart of this quality-minded producer; he's proud of having introduced the Eliot play to this country and now he's flying back to London to oversee his two theaters there and to make arrangements for two of Christopher Fry's plays in this country, "Venus Observed," which is keeping Laurence Olivier busy, and "Ring Around the Moon," an adaptation from the French.

KATHARINE CORNELL, with Blevins Davis at a Martha Graham matinee, enthuses over the cerebral dancer, who'll be appearing in Washington Tuesday night for the Institute of Contemporary Arts . . . Miss Kitty thinks highly of the Graham and is bound for Chicago with "That Lady," the New York failure of which she is frankly hurt about . . . Despite the notices, Miss Cornell feels it is one of her most impressive roles and thinks that folks on the road will go for it during a tour that will keep her busy till June.

MAURICE EVANS has an unexpected hit in "The Devil's Disciple," the Shaw comedy about the American revolution . . . This was put on at New York's City Center, with himself, Dennis King, Marsha Hunt and Victor Jory under Margaret Webster's direction . . . Seats for the two-week run were so rare, Aldrich and Myers have taken over the production and will present it for a regular Broadway run at the Royale beginning February 20. . . . As artistic director of the City Center's drama season, Evans this week offers the finale of the four-play season, "The Heiress," with Basil Rathbone in the role he created, then settles down at the Royale for a comparative rest.

OLIVER THORNDYKE, the tall, dark, smiling leading man who'd prefer to act on the stage but whose most regular assignments are as the wickedest young men in television, tells about the two actresses who visited Bernard Shaw last summer to get his okay for leading roles in his plays . . . first, who'd persuaded her friend who'd played Shavian heroines to come along to give her courage, passed muster . . . Then the other lady, whose name you know well, turned on the charm, told the Sage of Avot St. Lawrence that she had one dream, one desire in life—to play his "St. Joan." . . . Shaw drew her to the sunlight, looked her over carefully, lingered long on her face . . . "Yes, my dear," said the Master, "better hurry. Better hurry."

COSTARRING—Jerry Lewis, of the Martin & Lewis team which scored in "My Friend Irma," has a new pal named Pierre for the sequel, "My Friend Irma Goes West." Pierre, a 5-year-old chimp, is a whiz with the banana split, though Jerry reports he was stuck with the check

About 50% Of Symphony Fund Pledged

With only five days left to go, the National Symphony Orchestra's twentieth annual sustaining fund campaign is still more than 50 percent short of its $190,000 goal, Chairman Samuel Spencer announced yesterday.

Spencer said the campaign has been hampered by a shortage of volunteer solicitors. He called for more workers to canvass Washington residents for contributions.

About $86,000 have been contributed. This is $10,000 more than last year's contribution at this stage of the campaign, Spencer said.

The next report luncheon is scheduled at 12:30 p. m. Thursday in Barker Hall, 17th and K sts. nw. Contributions may be mailed to the National Symphony Orchestra, Washington 6, D. C. Volunteers will be welcomed at campaign headquarters, 1727 K st. nw., National 7198.

Rubinstein Tries a Novelty In Recital Without Program

By Richard Keith

A new stunt has been added to the Rubinstein show this year. The audience yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall found only a couple of blank pages in their programs. Equipped with a public address system and a monitor, who sat in the corner of the stage, Artur Rubinstein announced his program as he went along.

He apparently assumes people will come to hear and see "Rubinstein" regardless of what they may happen to encounter. Judging from the large attendance yesterday, his assumption is correct.

The suspense at the beginning was somewhat stimulating, but as he announced one chestnut after another, one's hopes for surprises gradually ebbed away and died. It turned out to be just another recital by Rubinstein.

While there are those who think that his playing of Chopin is too erratic, nevertheless, he is a true master of this ultraromantic style. Yesterday, he offered the Barcarolle, two Etudes, and the Andante Spianato and Polonaise. His soft playing is so ethereal at times and his tone so delicately colored that one wonders if he is playing a piano or some other instrument. His bravura execution is still as astonishing as ever. He careened through the C sharp minor Etude at an unbelievable speed, urging it even faster on the straight stretches.

He was equally successful in the sensitive "Maiden and the Nightingale" by Granados, and the fiery twelfth Rhapsody by Lizst, which closed the program. Debussy's "The Sunken Cathedral" and "The Joyous Isle," De Falla's "Dance of the Miller's Wife," and Liszt's "Valse Oubilee" made up the rest of the second half.

The "Waldstein" Sonata of Beethoven doesn't have much of a chance when it is pitted against Rubinstein. It got played yesterday probably as fast and frantically as it ever has been. This musical monument needs plenty of room and time to reveal its beauties.

One thing which always can be said for a Rubenstein concert is that it is never dull. The audience yesterday thoroughly enjoyed the music and received the artist warmly.

Ballet Sissy? Heck No, Says Ex-Olympian

Ballet dancing sissy? Absolutely not, said William J. Herrmann, jr., of Philadelphia, at the one-day regional meeting here of the Dance Masters of America yesterday.

Herrmann, 1932 Olympics winner in tumbling, conceded ballet is "not as strenuous as acrobatic dancing, but it is the foundation for acrobatic work and great for balance and poise."

Herrmann, 38, wears glasses and looks more like a lawyer than a man accustomed to walking on his hands. He is the head of the William J. Herrmann School of Athletics, founded by his father in 1890 and one of the oldest of its kind in the country. His grandfather founded the Philadelphia Turnverein.

Yesterday Herrmann was one of the instructors at the meeting in the Hotel Shoreham of approximately 100 dancing teachers from Washington and nearby States; his subject, acrobatic dancing. With him were Bonnie Nebelong, three times women's national tumbling champion, and Janet Stephenson to give demonstrations.

The national convention will be held in Washington again the last week in July and first week in August, it was announced at the day-long meeting.

New officers of the regional group, Chapter 17, also took office yesterday. They include Leroy H. Thayer, president; Lou Langlotz, first vice president; Hazel Richards, secretary-treasurer, all of Washington; and Ella Banks, second vice president, of Baltimore.

Foiled 'Romeo' Squirts Acid On 7th Victim

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 5 (U.P.).—A professor of abnormal psychology today said that Atlanta's "acid man" appears to be a frustrated Romeo whose "kink," if unchecked, might progress to murder.

The seventh young woman in five days felt the sting of the acid bath squirted from a water pistol last night on an Atlanta business street.

The "tall, handsome, flashily dressed man about 25"—the description is now becoming familiar to police—struck just at dusk, as he had in six previous attacks. Like the others, the latest victim was an attractive young woman, Mrs. C. E. Brown.

"For the good of the public and his own good it is desirable that this individual be brought in immediately and put under psychiatric treatment," said Prof. Herman W. Martin of Emory University.

"It may be that his abnormality is a mild form that will never get worse. On the other hand, men blocked or thwarted in their relationship with the opposite sex have been known to become bathtub and trunk murderers."

Atlanta's best police investigators still hadn't produced the slimmest lead to the acid man's identity.

Concert Series Continues

The twelfth program in the current YMCA concert series, to be held at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Central YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., will feature Dr. Karel Kase, baritone, accompanied by Dr. Frantisek Kase at the piano. The programs are open to the public without charge.

Civil Service Schedules Simplification of Layoff Rules as Next Project

The next major Civil Service Commission project will be to try to simplify layoff laws and regulations.

In general, the commission plans to follow the same pattern of its efficiency rating recommendations—to request Congress to give it the authority to fix layoff procedures. It would then, in turn, transfer this power to the agencies under standards and it would check on them to make sure its policies were followed.

The commission also is committed to these proposed changes: (1) To give agencies the power to suspend employes on the spot for cause up to 30 days, and (2) to place veterans on an equal footing with nonveterans with more than 10 years of service during reductions in force.

STORY: Representative Kirwan (D., Ohio) would like to make it possible for every person who goes fishing to catch at least one fish. The Nation's 15 million fishermen, he says, aren't being given a run for their money.

Specifically, he wants Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service to build more hatcheries to restock fishing streams. When agency officials appeared before his House Appropriations Subcommittee to explain their modest fish hatchery plans, the Ohio legislator told them:

"What a fooling the Government has given to the 15 million people who bought fishing licenses last year. The Government takes the money for fishing licenses and reaps the advantage of a tremendous business in fishing supplies and gives the fisherman practically nothing in return. I do not know a Nation in the world that has done that with their citizens. It does not look like you are trying to promote good sportsmanship. Give the fisherman at least a chance. Give him a run for his money."

Assistant Labor Secretary John Gibson is in line to be transferred to a bigger and better Federal job . . . Agriculture Undersecretary A. J. Loveland can be expected to resign soon to enter the Iowa Democratic primary for United States Senator. Representative Jenson (R., Iowa) told Douglas Wright of Interior's Southwestern Power: "I believe you have done one of the best jobs for America that has been done by any Federal employe in the past several years. . . . Representative Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.) has suggested that Congress develop an electronic brain machine to detect the "fat" in agency requests. The fantastic machines seem to be doing about everything else.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service will announce an examination soon for photoengravers, $2.63-an-hour, to fill vacancies at Government Printing and Bureau of Engraving and Printing . . . Only 201 persons passed the recent test for historian, foreign affairs officer, and social science analyst, $7600 to $10,000 starting salaries . . . An examination for storekeeper, $2450 to $2650, is open at Fort Belvoir, Va. . . . At St. Elizabeths Hospital here, a test is open for recreation technician, $2875 a year . . . The Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee will begin hearings Tuesday on the Johnson bill to reclassify the salaries of postmasters and postal supervisors.

CENSUS: It will lay off upward of 250 temporary and war service clerks by April 15. These employes are working on the business census. The agency hopes to take back those who have passed Civil Service tests to work on the general population census. The clerical work on it will not start until June.

NOTES: Agriculture has asked Congress to amend the eight-hour law to permit it to pay regular overtime to both laborers and mechanics who work more than eight hours in a single day . . . Federal Security's Vocational Rehabilitation Agency may be transferred to the Labor Department in an upcoming reorganization plan . . . Thomas A. Sullivan will be given the Army's meritorious civilian award for his work in the adjutant general's office. In the same office, another award winner, Bernice W. Clark, is retiring after 31 years of service.

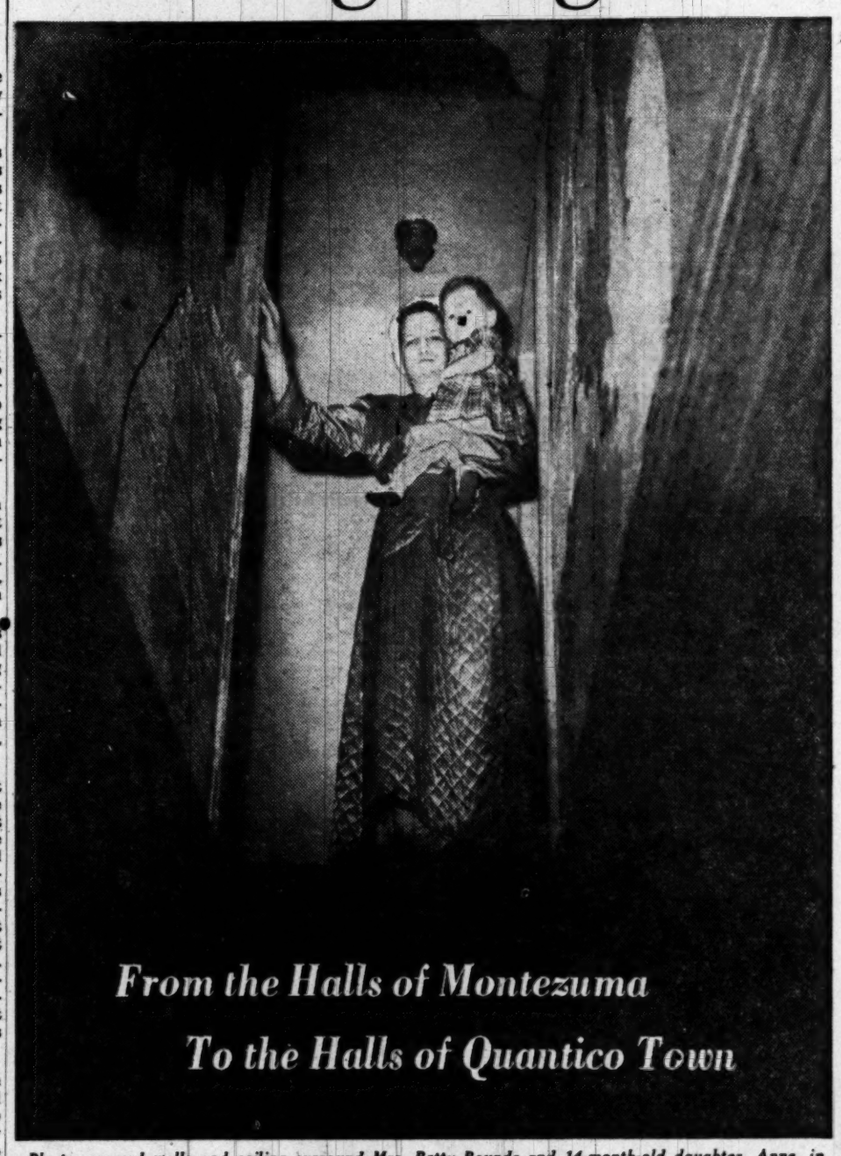
Housing Plight Arouses Quantico Marines



From the Halls of Montezuma
To the Halls of Quantico Town

Plaster-scarred walls and ceiling surround Mrs. Betty Bounds and 14-month-old daughter, Anne, in home at 229 Potomac st. Corp. C. R. Bounds, an 8-year Marine veteran, saw service in the Pacific. Only heat is gas stove

One spigot for four families, all without inside water—From left are Sergt. and Mrs. Doyle Fox and daughter, Donna Sue, and Corpl. and Mrs. John Manzutto and son Thomas. The four families live in a trailer and what they call three "converted chicken coops." All have to carry water from the single spigot. Corporal Manzutto says "the situation is pretty bad" and Sergeant Fox plans "to get out pretty soon."

"A crime," say Marine wives of trailer camp at Dumfries, near Quantico. Here are, from left, Mrs. C. E. Richmier, with son Richard and Margaret; Mrs. Edward Oliver and Helen; Mrs. Gordon Murr, with children David, Diane and Douglas; and Mrs. E. F. Gallagher and Marcia Marine husbands of these four mothers have served a total of 29 years in the service of their country. Rent in their trailer-camp homes is $55 a month. Talk to these women and their husbands about "housing conditions" and you will hear a variety of comments, all of them bad. They don't like them, and they will tell you so

Newlyweds Sergt. and Mrs. John Goar have one room and a kitchen, but no running water in apartment. Here Mrs. Goar displays her makeshift "closet"

Outside Spigot, Overflowing Cesspool Cited; Trailers at Dumfries Rent for $55 a Month; Approval for 450 Low-Cost Units Due, But They Will Not Be Ready Before Spring, 1951

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Quantico, Va., Feb. 5.—The plaster is falling from the halls of Montezuma. The gaze on Heaven's scenes is an overflowing cesspool.

If you and your wife and your baby want water, there's a spigot in the front yard. But no egg in your beer: You share that spigot with other families.

The men of this Marine Corps base are angry right down through their Marine guts.

Angry at having to live in slums. At having to pay $55 a month for some of them.

"The town of Quantico is a scab on the fair face of Virginia," Commander James Davis, USN, base public works officer, told the Virginia General Assembly the past week.

The commander said he was "shocked, appalled and sickened" by the "ruthlessness of property owners" renting to Marine and Navy personnel. He suggested a congressional investigation.

The commander isn't talking through his brass hat, a look-around here indicated.

One Marine corporal and his wife pay $25 a month for a decrepit, linoleum-rugged room in which they cook, eat, sit and sleep. They share the bath with four other families. The windowpane beside their bed is out.

They stuff a towel in it at night to keep from freezing.

It is this house in which the landlord has posted on the peeling wall a stern notice about lighting the hot water tanks:

"I would hate to have to ask anyone to move."

313 Broadway

For two rooms Sergt. and Mrs. John W. Goar pay $32.75 a month. If utilities are included it is about $45 now. No running water, no closet, share-bath, and heat only from one tiny gas stove.

The only thing fancy they have is the address: 313 Broadway.

Goar, like an average Marine, is a Purple Heart man. He and his wife are newlyweds. She is 21. She is intelligent and a chin-up girl who could make a trash pile look neat.

Most girls would cry, it being a crime for brides and bridegrooms to have to come to such homes, but Mrs. Goar is angry: "You wouldn't want any of your friends, your parents, to see a thing like this."

One two-story architectural oddity on the edge of town looked as if it might collapse on its own haunches any moment. A number of Marine families live, to use a generous verb, here.

Mrs. James Whisenhunt, whose husband is a staff sergeant, invited us in.

Her rent, she said, is $30 a month. Eight people, she said, share the rusty-looking bathroom. The back door is so warped it won't close.

Then, there are the trailers in nearby Dumfries.

By "trailer," don't visualize these sleek jobs on Washington lots These look like piles of tin—war surplus, we were told. Washington is supposed to have the highest rent in the country but Quantico tops it. These "dwelling units" rent for $55 a month.

Sergt. and Mrs. G. W. Murr, in one of them ,have three children, a fourth on the way. On Tinian, Saipan . . . Murr had fought the Japs.

Fought in Pacific

Indeed most of these men who are living in worse quarters than that enjoyed by a good bourgeois cow are men who fought at Guadalcanal and Peleliu, at Iwo Jima and Okinawa—how many wartime Marines do you know who didn't see battle?

The fact they fought in war is beside the point.

But the fact they are in the Marine Corps would seem to make it to the point that the Government sees to it they have suitable quarters.

As Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., who led many of these men into battle and who now as commandant at Quantico is leading the fight to get them decent housing says:

"Attachment to the Marine Corps Schools at Quantico is not a matter of a Marine's own choosing. Military personnel are ordered to this post whether that assignment is welcome or not."

Relief Next Year

Approval to construct 450 low-cost housing units is due. But they won't be ready at the earliest before spring of 1951.

Commander Davis, with General Shepherd's backing, went down to Richmonud to fight for retention of rent controls.

The very fact that some landlords know more housing units are on the way, says Davis, may cause them to boost rents while they can.

Some of the Marine families were at first a bit afraid to talk with a reporter.

They feared their landlords might throw them out of plaster-peeling, no-running-water, no-bathroom, broken-window quarters.

Fighting Blood

But the fighting blood of Corp. John Manzutto, who fought at Bougainville, Okinawa and Guadalcanal, is beginning to rise. His voices rakes the air like a machine-gun:

"You can quote me as saying, I think it stinks. To bring up children in this . . ."

The Manzuttos and their child have two years lived in two box-size rooms in a building which they say was a former chicken-coop. They pay $25 a month rent plus utilities, the total coming to about $34. They pay $1.20 a month water bill and there is no running water inside, only a spigot outside which they share with other families.

The bathroom is reached by walking outside and entering another door. The several families, including eleven adults, share it, Manzutto said. The bathroom has only cold-water taps.

Taking a bath is faintly suggestive of the plans for mounting an assault on Saipan.

You get a bucket, go to the front yard spigot, fill the bucket, take it inside to the stove, heat it, take the hot water around the house to the bath . . . keep it up until the tub's filled. By which time the water's cold anyhow.

Cesspool Overflowed

Manzutto showed where the cesspool overflowed. This isn't so bad in winter. But in summer when the hot winds blow over it and into the house, it is sometimes difficult to sleep at night.

The corporal commented: "I've seen better places on Okinawa."

Now the Manzutto's neighbors and good friends are Sergt. and Mrs. Doyle Fox. They see each other frequently including meetings at the water spigot.

Sergeant Fox is a big, easy-going guy of 25 who joined the Marines when he was 18. He is the sort who would make a good career Marine and would probably enjoy the life.

But the sergeant has had it.

The sergeant took the Marshalls, he took Okinawa, he took the Jap Zeros and the banzais always just over the hill, and the hot malarial tropics. . . .

But that was himself. This is another thing again.

The sergeant will be damned if he will take any more of this. Won't bring up his wife and two children in a converted, and not very converted, chicken-coop.

In exactly 38 days the sergeant is quitting the Marines and going to work for a construction company in Vincennes, Ind.

The sergeant wants no more of the halls of Quantico.

Bishop McNamara, speaking for Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle who was unable to attend, praised the Scout movement for its "contributions to good citizenship." He was assisted by William Kehoe, State deputy for the District Knights of Columbus, and the Rev. Edward A. Fuller, chaplain of the Catholic Boy Scouts for the Archdiocese of Washington.

Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 5 was formally opened yesterday amidst expressions of gratitude for public support and dreams of future expansion.

Speaking from the bunting-draped platform before the clubhouse at 1001 K st. se., Robert C. Simmons, president of the Boys Clubs Board, described the clubs as "youth banks," and reminded his audience of 350 persons "the youth of the city are the men of tomorrow."

Simmons expressed appreciation of the public's support of the clubs, the Metropolitan Police Department's work in connection with them, and the Fire Department's cooperation in making available for No. 5 Club the building formerly occupied by No. 18 engine company and later used as a warehouse.

Club in Every Precinct

"I see through the eyes of Superintendent of Police Barrett a vision of the time when every precinct in Washington shall have a clubhouse at least as good as this one," Simmons said.

Barrett said there are now "20,000 boy members, and we want 40,000." There are now eight clubs and two camps, he said.

Wash B. Williams, chairman of the Boys Clubs 1950 campaign for adult memberships, said it is hoped the drive will exceed $350,000.

Chief Engineer Joseph A. Mayhew of the Fire Department traced the history of the site, revealing it was used for public service purposes more than a century.

Saved Girl's Life

Carl William Beattie, 14, of 720 Sixth st. se., who last week received in New York the Joe DiMaggio-Columbia Broadcasting System award of the week as an outstanding athlete and for having saved a girl's life, said he has been a member of No. 5 Club eight years "and all my fellow members and myself will enjoy this new clubhouse."

Other youthful participants included Fred Tucker, 13, of 1259 K st. se., and the red-and-blue uniformed Boys Club band.

Dr. J. L. V. Murray, a vice president of the board, was master of ceremonies. Among others participating were Mrs. Joseph L. Arnold, auxiliary president, and Orvin J. Davy and Mrs. Ada M. Minnix of the Southeast Citizens Association.

Following the program, the remodeled building was opened to public inspection.

REGULARLY SCHEDULED RAISES

TELEPHONE WAGES BETTER

Here in Washington, 50% of Telephone Employees Will Get Increases This Year

BY ANY sound and fair test, the wages paid telephone people have more than kept pace with those paid in other industries for work requiring comparable knowledge, skill and capacity.

But that isn't the full story. For unlike workers in many other industries, most telephone people receive in addition, scheduled wage increases—generally at 3, 6 or 12-month intervals—until they reach the top pay for their particular job. Known as progression raises, these increases are a part of existing contracts. Employees don't have to ask for them—or strike to get them.

This is one of the many facts about telephone wages that national union leaders, in running down the telephone job, have chosen to ignore. Yet these progression raises alone boosted the Washington telephone payroll by more than $500,000 last year.

Wages Up 97%; Cost of Living Up Only 67%

Besides regular progression increases, telephone employees in Washington have received 7 general wage increases in the past 10 years—amounting, at present to $10,900,000 a year—or nearly five times the increase in telephone rates during the same period.

While the cost of living has gone up here only 67% since before the war, telephone wages have gone up 97%.

Here Are the Average Earnings of Telephone People in Washington

FULLY EXPERIENCED CABLE SPLICERS AND CENTRAL OFFICE REPAIRMEN	$94.96 A WEEK	$4,957.00 A YEAR
(Employees in these crafts with one year's service average $49.37 a week or $2,577.00 a year; with five year's service, $74.48 a week or $3,888.00 a year.)
FULLY EXPERIENCED SWITCHBOARD OPERATING EMPLOYEES	$59.23 A WEEK	$3,092.00 A YEAR
(Operators with one year's service average $44.44 a week or $2,320.00 a year; with five years' service, $53.01 a week or $2,767.00 a year.)
FULLY EXPERIENCED BUSINESS OFFICE WOMEN (SERVICE REPRESENTATIVES)	$62.00 A WEEK	$3,236.00 A YEAR
(Service Representatives with one year's service average $47.59 a week or $2,484 a year; with five years' service $54.21 a week or $2,830.00 a year.)

Half of the Telephone People in Washington Are Fully Experienced Employees.

Guide to Glamour

Carbon Copy Always Shows Up as Phony

By Terry Hunt

So you want to be a "man's woman?" Or you want a more glamorous career? Or you just want to hold the husband—or the job—you have?

Here is advice from an expert—a man whose business is glamour and character building.

Terry Hunt is a conditioner of Hollywood stars. Among his clients are Rita Hayworth, Joan Crawford, Shirley Temple. Betty Grable says: "Terry Hunt has helped more stars keep their names on theater marquees than most directors."

This series is a condensation of the recent book, "Guide to Glamour," Prentice-Hall, Inc.

CHAPTER TWO—DON'T BE A CARBON COPY

IF YOU put a piece of carbon paper between two sheets of writing paper, it's a simple matter to distinguish the carbon copy from the original. The original is fresh, true, and real.

This country is filled with "carbon copies"—young girls and old, going about in imitation of this big star and that.

Every town and village has its carbon copy of Hedy, Lana, or Rita, each a take-off on some screen siren or the current "oomph" girl.

It takes a lot of work to effect this take-off; it's not as simple as slipping a piece of carbon between two sheets of paper. And where do their strenuous efforts get them? Exactly nowhere! They're immediately labeled as "phony."

Quite often the personality, manner and mode of dress of the star they are emulating does not sit well with these women.

A Shadow of a Shadow No Good

INSTEAD of being their own lovely, radiant selves, these women develop into third and fifth rate copies of the beautiful stars whose shadows they see flashing upon the silver screen.

"Be yourself" is a great lesson to learn in starting the climb to developing a glamorous personality. If "being yourself" means that you will be dull, phlegmatic, unattractive, then change that self.

Analyze your lacks and rectify them. But remember always that you'll never be an outstanding personality unless you are genuine. If this means that you must do a thorough housecleaning on yourself, transforming yourself completely inside and out, that's fine.

Of course if you want people to be attracted to you, you must supply some of that attraction—and in a woman, that attraction is physical.

It's Easy to Be Unattractive

CONDITIONING, proper diet, exercise, make-up, costuming—it's all here in these articles.

There have been women in the past, who, though crippled or physically deformed, have battled through to success, solely through the magnificent vitality and fascination of their personalities.

But exceptions such as these merely prove the rule. If you are sluggish, weary, apathetic, dull, you can never attract anyone.

Learn the power of your smile and use it to advantage.

What have you got to smile about? You're alive, aren't you? Then show it! Let your emotions show on your face—transform it from a lifeless mask into a sensitive instrument accurately recording your moods.

Keep your head up, your chin out; face the world with assurance. Don't droop; don't sigh mentally, physically, or spiritually.

Don't constantly bathe yourself in a tepid, strangling bath of self-pity. Don't ever show despair at your chances of making good, or for any other reason.

Always exude an air of strength and sureness of your own powers, of your own magnetic personality, of your courage.

You Can't Be Tense and Win

PEOPLE flock to the strong and ignore the weak. Remember that. As you develop strength of character, power of personality, so the world will be intrigued by you and cheer you.

Acquire poise. Don't be tense, apprehensive, unsure of yourself. Learn to take life easily, gracefully, in your stride.

Force yourself to be more casual in your contacts with people, friendly and pleasant, without stiffness or coldness.

Too many people are ashamed to express an honest emotion. How silly is such prudishness. If you are happy, exilarated, gay, let the world in on your good mood—it loves to laugh, too! And laughing with you, it is sure to like you.

You cannot be withdrawn in character or personality and still "register" with people. They do not feel the life in you, the vibrance, the spirit which, in the more lively girl, is so pleasant and welcome.

Don't Hide a 'Heart of Gold'

BEING TOO SHY or backward gives an impression of stupidity, or lack or interest. If people are not repelled by such an attitude, at least they get no satisfaction from it and so turn away. You may have a heart of gold beneath that quiet-looking exterior—but how are they to know it?

Which brings us to a vital point. Aren't you really interested in the welfare, the activities, the heartaches, and problems of other people? Well, you really should be.

There's much to be learned from such observation. Every human being has something of value to give his neighbor. If you do not possess this interest, how about imaging it is there?

Listen to your neighbor's conversation with real attention. Try to visualize yourself in his place. Make an honest effort to be helpful. If you actually do some good, it will leave you with a warm contented feeling inside. If not, you'll at least be glad you tried.

It's common knowledge that many a great talent has gone unnoticed in the theatrical world because of one thing—lack of personality.

A great singer, a great dancer, a great actress—she's not just a voice, a pair of nimble feet, a face—she's all these, PLUS personality.

And you're in show business too—the greatest show on earth—the show of life!

ASK ANNE:

You Don't Have to Be Michelangelo To Make Clever Shower Invitations; Anne Gives Sure-Fire Party Formula

ANNE

DEAR ANNE:

I've been to a hundred showers, but now that I want to give one, I haven't an idea in the world.

How can I give the party the "right start in life?" Send written invitations, ring guests on the phone, ask them when I see them? What kind of games would be appropriate? What refreshments could I serve? It's to be a baby shower.

C. F. S.

Try a Baby Book Party

HERE'S a pretty notion for a shower to greet the stork—a "baby book party."

You needn't be a Michelangelo to make the dainty invitations yourself—and written invitations do make a party seem more festive.

Use pale pink and blue stationery. Cut the pink paper in pieces about 2 inches wide and 4 inches long. Cut the blue just a fraction less wide and long, put it outside the pink and fold them exactly in the middle like a book.

Punch two holes along the folded edge, run a narrow pink ribbon through and tie in small bow on the front outside. The book will look as though it has a pink edge. Letter on the outside "Baby's Book" and make a simple line drawing of a stork.

Inside write the invitation on the right-hand page somewhat as follows: "On Friday, February 10, at 4 p. m., Virginia (Mrs. William) Gordon is having a miscellaneous shower for my future mother, Mrs. Tom Smith, and me. Both Virginia and I hope you can come. (Signed) Expected Baby Smith."

Follow this with the address where the party is being given and "r. s. v. p." If appropriate, add: "P. S.—The party is to be a surprise for mother."

Colorful Gifts

GIFTS at such a party, suggested in the "Cokesbury Shower Book" (Cokesbury Abingdon Press), could be presented in a pasteboard suit box, fixed up like a big book. Do this by covering it with pink or blue paper or pale flowered wallpaper and lettering it "Baby's Book" with water colors, colored crayon or chalk. Make the inside more attractive with a pastel tissue paper lining.

As for games, here's one idea: Give everyone a sheet of paper and a pencil. Have each paper labeled: "A Photograph for Baby's Book." Instruct each guest to draw a picture of the person seated directly to her left as that person probably looked at the age of 6 months.

For the best picture, give a prize—a pretty rattle, perhaps, or a bottle of ink attractively wrapped and marked "For Writing in Baby's Book." (Idea is that the winner will turn it over to the future mother!)

If there's someone in the crowd who is talented with the camera it might be a nice idea to take a picture of the group to be given to the mother for her baby book.

And Raspberry Chiffon Pie

FOR refreshments you might have a dainty gelatin salad and sandwich plate, plus pastel mint and coffee. Or, instead, a delicious dessert, such as raspberry chiffon pie, could be prepared in advance, and served with coffee.

RASPBERRY CHIFFON PIE

1 envelope plain gelatin
¼ cup raspberry juice
1½ cups heavy cream
½ cup milk
¾ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons lemon juice
3 egg whites
Pinch of cream of tartar
1 cup frozen raspberries (drained)
1 cup chopped walnuts
Chocolate crumb crust
Sweetened whipped cream

Soften gelatin in raspberry juice five minutes. Dissolve over hot water. Combine cream, milk, sugar, salt and lemon juice. Blend in dissolved gelatin. Chill until slightly thickened. Fold in raspberries and walnuts. Beat egg whites with cream of tartar until stiff but not dry. Fold into fruit mixture. Pour into 9-inch pie pan lined with chocolate crumb crust. Chill in refrigerator. Garnish before serving with sweetened whipped cream.

CRUST: Mix 1½ cups fine crumbs made of chocolate cookies with ¼ cup sugar and ½ cup melted butter. Press firmly into 9-inch pie pan to make lining. Chill 20 minutes, then bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 10 minutes.

AVOCADOS offer good salad material for parties and other purposes right now. Maybe we should say "Calavoes." That's what they call the big, beautiful ones coming in from California. They'll be at their peak during February and March.

The crop's not a whopper this year, but the rich fruit is about the same price as for several springs past. ("Unfortunate" weather has been holding the crop down. They say if they ever get really good weather out there, we'll be knee-deep in calavoes.)

To make a fine salad for supper, rub a bowl with a bit of garlic, then break lettuce, romaine, and chickory into it. Just before serving, toss lightly with French dressing and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cut calavo in halves lengthwise and remove seeds and skin. Cut into thin lengthwise sections. Cut tomato into wedges. Top bowl of greens with alternating calavo slices and tomato wedges.

California beauties, good for party salads.

Make Home Here After Honeymoon

Capt. and Mrs. Pete Psomas are making their home in Washington after a wedding trip to Lake Placid, N. Y. Mrs. Psomas is the former Miss Phyllis Margaret Killinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth E. Killinger. Captain Psomas, a member of the USAF, is the son of Mrs. Peter Psomas and the late Mr. Psomas of Detroit.

Mrs. Truman Heads Symphony Sponsors

Mrs. Truman has taken a box for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's first appearance in Washington on March 11. The First Lady has also consented to serve as honorary chairman of the Sponsors' Committee for that event. Another native daughter of Missouri, Mrs. John R. Steelman, will be acting chairman.

Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, wife of the Vice President, will assist Mrs. Steelman along with Mrs. John Snyder, Mrs. Harry Vaughan, Mrs. James K. Vardaman, Mrs. A. Lloyd Symington and Mrs. Clark Clifford. The committee will meet for luncheon in the Mayflower cocktail lounge on February 15 to discuss ways and means of giving Conductor Vladimir Golschmann and his orchestra a Washington ovation by filling Constitution Hall on March 11.

Tobé Says...

Daily Double—Wool Dress and 'Little Fur'

It's been years since wool dresses were a big spring fashion. Suits and ensembles, yes—but separate wool dresses have seemed a little heavy when worn under spring coats. With this great new vogue for little furs, however, a wool dress is exactly right—in fashion, in weight and in type.

Smartest of all are the sheer worsted crepes—navy or perhaps a pretty light beige—in sophisticated one or two piece dresses on the dressy side.

Checked wools look fresh and new, too—navy or black and white, and gray or beige and white. Crisply accented in white pique or linen, these are the personification of spring itself.

YOU MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS AND NOT KNOW IT!
Fidgeting, nose-picking and a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms . . . ugly parasites that medical experts say infest one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.
To get rid of Pin-Worms, these pests must not only be killed, but killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:
First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly and easily.
Don't take chances with this dangerous, highly contagious condition. At the first sign of Pin-Worms, ask your druggist for genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge . . . the small, easy-to-take tablets perfected by famous Dr. D. Jayne & Son, specialists in worm remedies for over 100 years.

End of a Perfect Day; Cocktails with Friends

By Elizabeth Maguire

SUNSHINE yesterday kept Washingtonians outdoors. There were drives to the mountains of Virginia, walks along the canal, and bicycling on country roads. The end of a perfect day came in the late afternoon at cocktail parties and teas.

Miss Eve Boden, an out-of-town debutante from Wilmington, was honor guest at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. John M. Stafford from 5 to 7 at their house in Georgetown. Another Georgetown party was the tea given by Miss Peggy Pence for Miss Hope Erwin, whose bridesmaid she will be when Miss Erwin weds Macdonald Goodwin on February 18th.

Miss Pence's party was a household shower for the bride-elect, given at the home of Mrs. William Eaton. Among the guests were Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, mother of the bride; Mrs. Charles P. Montgomery, grandmother of the hostess; Mrs. Easton, bridal attendants, and a number of other young friends.

Other Parties
On Day's Menu

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT H. MONTGOMERY entertained for Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Peter Miller, jr. Guests invited to drop by between 6 and 8 p. m. included Senator Margaret Chase Smith, Senator and Mrs. George W. Malone, the First Secretary of the Chinese Embassy and Mrs. Joseph Ku, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harkness, Mr. and Mrs. Walker Buell, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Spivak, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hogate and Lieut. Col. Henrik von Platen, first secretary of the Swedish Embassy.

Other party hosts and hostesses were Mrs. Harold Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Edward McKinney Hunt, who also entertained at the cocktail hour.

Miss Claire Snow left New York last night by plane and was to arrive in Puerto Rico this morning at 7 a. m. By plane she will go on to the Virgin Islands, visiting at St. Croix and St. Thomas, and then back again to Puerto Rico for a short stop before flying to the Dominican Republic and Haiti. Next stop in this midwinter's dream will be Cuba, where she will be joined by Mrs. William Mann. All this will take Miss Snow about three and a half weeks. Then she will be back again in her native Washington.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg, Parr Johnson, Mrs. Powell and Mrs. Rahel Davies Fitch.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waggaman also gave a dinner at the Chevy Chase Club Saturday evening, entertaining for Mrs. Frank Vanderlip, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arnold N. Welles, Robert Lunny, Prince and Princess Pignatelli, and others.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8, 1950 for the purposes of considering proposed amendments to the Zoning Regulations, and amendments to the maps of the use, height, and area districts, the general summary of which reads as follows: Proposed amendments to Zoning Regulations, amend Paragraph 9, Section IV, to read: "9. Dyeing and cleaning works and a laundry employing more than five persons, except when the same is permitted by the Board of Zoning Adjustment as provided in Section XXIII." Amend all paragraphs of the Zoning Regulations limiting the size of private garages to 400 and 800 square feet, respectively, to increase such area to 450 and 900 square feet respectively, as follows: Section I.—Definitions: Private garage, 900 square feet. Section, III.—Residential district, paragraph 10 (b), 900 square feet; paragraph 10 (c), 900 square feet, and paragraph 11, 450 square feet. Section XXIII, Part 2, Paragraph 15: 900 square feet; paragraph 16, 450 square feet, and 900 square feet; and paragraph 19, 450 square feet and 900 square feet. Amend Paragraph 10, Part 2, Section XXIII, to read: "10. Permit in a first commercial district an automobile repair shop, public service garage, gasoline or oil service station, bakery employing more than five persons, dyeing and cleaning works employing more than five persons, or laundry employing more than five persons, and a mechanical automobile laundry, provided that no portion of any street frontage of the building or premises so to be used shall be opposite a residential district, measured at right angles to the intervening street or streets, and no portion of the building or premises so to be used would be located within 25 feet of a residential district, unless separated therefrom by a public alley and provided that the Board shall find (a) that no dangerous or otherwise objectionable traffic conditions may result, (b) that any noise or odor will not affect the neighborhood adversely, (c) that the city plan or the present character or future development of the neighborhood will not be affected adversely, and (d) that such a location is not in such proximity to a school, church, or hospital as to affect adversely the public convenience, interest, or safety. Before making such findings the Board shall submit the application to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Director of Traffic for report." Amend Paragraph 29, Part 2, Section XXIII, to read: "29. Permit in a residential district the erection of antenna towers for television and frequency modulation broadcasting to any height and in conjunction therewith the erection, alteration or use of buildings for transmission equipment and broadcasting studios, provided: "(a) That the proposed location and height will not affect adversely the use of neighboring property in accordance with the zoning regulations and map; (b) That any part of an antenna tower is removed from all lot lines a distance of at least one-sixth of its height or is separated from other property by an intervening street; (c) That the proposed height of the tower is reasonably necessary to render satisfactory service to all parts of the District of Columbia; (d) That any transmission equipment to be housed in a residential district is technically necessary for satisfactory and reasonably economical transmission; and (e) That the use of any studio permitted hereunder shall be limited to persons participating in the broadcasting program. There shall be no studio audience. Before granting such appeals the Board shall submit the application to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for a report; provided, however, that antenna towers to be erected to a greater height than any limit prescribed by the Act of June 1, 1910, regulating the height of buildings in the District of Columbia (36 Stat. 452) shall require approval by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia."

TO HUSBANDS whose Wives are going through
"CHANGE OF LIFE"
No question about it! A woman going through "the change" is often a real problem. Nervous, tense . . . depressed one day, cranky the next . . . it's enough to drive a man almost crazy!
But take hope, Mister! If your wife is just a "bundle of nerves" because of functional upsets, tell her about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.
Developed by a prominent doctor, this famous uterine sedative has been used by over 7 million women, often with remarkable results. Taken regularly, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription acts as a tonic to help build up resistance and calm jittery nerves. It may be just what your wife needs to make her feel "like herself" again.
Ask your druggist for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. 36 tablets, 90¢. Liquid, $1.

New Sewing Club For Mothers With Small Children
By Jean Belaire
Sewing club groups have been planned to fill the needs of young mothers with small children of school or pre-school age and a minimum amount of free time in which to plan and make wardrobes for themselves and the children. These mothers are taught how to make clothing out of anything from father's out-worn tuxedo to flour sacks. Big sister's last year's dress becomes baby's first play suit. This class meets the need for every conceivable type of sewing for the home, from draperies to dungarees. The members of this group who wish to bring along children of pre-school age are extended the privilege of using one of the classrooms as a nursery during this morning period, with the provision that each group will independently arrange to employ one supervisor for every ten children. The school is equipped with a complete electric kitchen and is air-conditioned. Children can be taken to a park within a block of the school in fair weather. If this is your idea of heaven, you'll find it at The Belaire School of Practical Dress Design, at 821 19th St. N.W. STerling 9040.

'Berlin Command'

Gen. Howley Warns Russians No Longer Fear U.S.

By Brig. Gen. Frank Howley

This is the second of 12 articles taen from the new book, "Berlin Command," which will be run daily in The Washington Post. The author, Brig. Gen. Frank Howley, battled the Russians for four years, from 1945 to 1949, as deputy commander and then commander of American forces in Berlin.

DURING the airlift days in Berlin we knew we had the Russians licked.

They didn't want war. They weren't ready for it. They feared American military, economic, and industrial might.

But by the time the last C-54 sat down at Templehof airfield last September, the world picture had altered dramatically.

President Truman had announced the news of the atomic explosion in Russia.

It WAS an atomic bomb. Of this I am convinced. Whether the Russians have the plane to deliver the A-bomb, I do not know, but now that they possess the ultimate means of destroying us, the balance has changed.

They no longer fear war with the United States, and I consider it imperative for the American people to know the lessons we learned in Berlin.

These are the same people we dealt with there, and they will not hesitate to attack us one year, two years, or five years from now, when they have accumulated a stockpile of bombs and when it suits their purpose. Beyond doubt, world domination is the Soviet aim.

We went to Berlin in 1945, thinking only of the Russians as big, jolly, balalaika-playing fellows, who drank prodigious quantities of vodka and liked to wrestle in the drawing room.

We know now—or should know—that we were hopelessly naive. You can't do business with the Russians except on their own terms, which means complete surrender of all the ideals Americans have lived by since our country was founded. They can't be trusted.

They will promise anything, sign anything, provided it benefits them, and will scrap the pledge the moment it doesn't. American business life is carried on largely by checks, which imply trust. The Russians are ideologically incapable of such a system, because they would dishonor their signatures the next day—if it happened to be expedient.

Let's forget evasive parliamentary rhetoric. We must not get lost in sonorous phrases like Winston Churchill's "terminological inexactitudes?"

Liars and Swindlers

THE Russians are the world's most colossal liars, swindlers, and cutthroats, and there is no reason to think they will change. They will smother you with pleasant words and steal your shoes.

It is all very well poking our heads in the clouds and saying the Russians are misunderstood, or airily contending they live by another code. Such rationalizations fail to alter the fact that by our standards, or by any standards of common decency, they are liars, swindlers, and cutthroats.

Our wedding with them in Berlin never even produced a honeymoon, much less a happy life together.

General Eisenhower and General Clay enjoyed fleeting moments of what appeared to be understanding with Marshal Zhukov and Marshal Sokolovsky, the top Russian commanders, and their subordinates. But after the vodka fumes were dissipated and the caviar savor vanished, our leaders discovered their pockets had been picked.

For example, at the outset Sokolovsky assured Clay that the Red Army would not be used as an instrument for promoting communism in Germany. I had a funny feeling at the time that "Wise Guy" Sokolovsky was lying and I said so.

"But I know Sokolovsky," Clay protested. "He wouldn't lie to me."

General Clay is a scrupulously honest soldier, who finds it impossible to understand an unprincipled man. Later on, of course, he discovered that Sokolovsky had lied. The Red Army was an instrument used in efforts to communize Germany.

At the Allied Kommandatura, housed in a modest administration building in the American sector, we made the most crucial effort at international cooperation on a down-to-earth level attempted since the end of World War II.

We tried every means to do business with the Russians.

At first, we acquiesced in order to get a working basis. Then we accepted unfavorable terms. We tried appeasement; we tried to buy them out. But, like blackmailers, once you give them a check and think everything is settled, they always come back for more.

Treat 'Em Like Gangsters

THERE is only one way to deal with gangsters, Russian-uniformed or otherwise, and that is to treat them like gangsters.

The Russians are utterly ruthless in achieving their ends. Everything the decent American stands for in his home and family, his principles and his humanitarianisms, is lacking in Russian character.

When starvation and probable mass murder were considered the best weapon to employ to drive out the Western powers, they didn't flinch. That a Berlin "horror story" did not take place was not due to any change in the Russian heart. It was because we anticipated some such devlish scheme and were able to circumvent it.

The Russian interpretation of justice is as wicked as their political idea.

While we were discussing the creation of people's courts in Berlin, I asked a Russian officer if the Soviets ever tried an accused person.

"No," he said in amazement. "We never do. If a man is brought before the court he's guilty; otherwise he wouldn't be there. All the court has to do is determine the punishment."

How alien this is to our Anglo-Saxon judicial creed, holding that a man is innocent until he is found guilty by a jury of his peers.

Our hands-across-the-Iron-Curtain cranks say that we must try to understand the Russians. Understand them? That's beyond the power of any Westerners. But the Kussians understand us perfectly.

Unwittingly, I once almost wrote a man's death sentence—by paying him a compliment. I am not so certain, looking back, that I didn't send him to his death or to some severe punishment.

He was a man whose services I really appreciated, and I said as much to his superior. "So-and-so." I remarked sincerely, "is a real friend of America."

"He is, is he?" replied the superior, his eyes narrow with suspicion. "Then why don't you take him to America, where he can continue to work for you?"

The damage was done; I realized that too late. The man was removed and I never saw him again. I learned from that experience that you can't compliment a Russian or his cooperation, which is regarded as a sign of weakness and an offense against the Soviet state. Russians can be friends of only one country—the USSR—and keep their health.

In my efforts to understand them, I was in closer contact with the Russians than any other American in Europe. I met thousands, from Marshal Zhukov down to field privates.

At Kommandatura sessions, I spent 2000 hours in discussions with them, wrangling chiefly with my Russian corresponding number, Maj. Gen. A. G. Kotikov, commandant of the Russian sector.

Tried Bourbon

MY FOUR children used to play with the five youngsters of a high Russian officer. They romped around the house with his kids, ate Russian cakes, and amused themselves with the model electric train he had installed on the drawing-room table—an excellent example of Russo-American toy railroading.

The Russian practiced his burgeoning English on me and I tried my Bourbon on him. But this interchange brought us no closer to understanding. He was still the inscrutable Russian.

My corresponding number at the Kommandatura, General Kotikov, was my number one antagonist. He was the eiptome and the quintessence of the evil doctrines Moscow preaches. A big, bulky man, with flowing white hair, icy blue eyes, and a mouth like a petulant rosebud, his mind turned on and off automatically with switches operated in the Kremlin.

My four years in Berlin gave me gray hair, but I have the satisfaction that I gave Kotikov stomach ulcers. That, at least, makes us even.

Tomorrow: The General "accidentally" punches his first Russian.

Bill's Contributors Get Credit, Not Cash

I'll ask it though you probably
Will think this question brash:
Do you pay your contributors
In bylines or hard cash?
R. B. S.

Repulsive thought, that "paying cash."
With me it makes no hit.
Besides, how could I ever pay
For "priceless" gems of wit?

SHE WUZ ROBBED

A reader who wishes to remain anonymous complains that she parked her car beside a parking meter early one Saturday morning, deposited a nickel, and came back 15 minutes later to find a "red meter" ticket.

"It was early, there was no congestion, nobody else parked nearby, and no reason for the ticket," she writes. "I was furious."

But at No. 9 Precinct, where she went to lodge her complaint, she was told: "Your car extended beyond the meter into the next parking place, which showed a red meter."

"Imagine," counters the irate motorist. "The front of my car was 12 inches beyond the meter and for that I got a ticket."

District Traffic Engineer John H. Mitton sheds some light on the controversy. He says:

"There are supposed to be white lines clearly defining parking spaces at all meters. But we give first priority to maintaining safety lane lines for moving traffic, so some of these parking space lines are not too clearly visible at times.

"However, when they are visible you will notice that the meters are not set at the extreme end of the spaces, but 18 inches back from the front end. If you park with your bumper even with the meter, you're 18 inches from the space assigned to the car ahead—and the car ahead is supposed to be 18 inches from the back end of its own space.

"This leaves 3 feet between parked cars, to comply with the District traffic regulation which prohibits parking within 3 feet of another vehicle.

"If the facts in this case are exactly as the woman states (and I do not know whether they were or weren't) then it would appear that somebody slipped up. If her bumper was only 12 inches beyond the meter, she was still inside her own space.

"If there had been a car in front of her, the policeman might have tagged her for parking within 3 feet of another vehicle. But I don't see how he could charge her with a red meter in the zone beyond.

"Maybe you didn't get all the facts from the complainant. That happens sometimes."

Maybe so. But there's no mistaking one fact about the lady. She's in high dudgeon.

REVENGE

The worm (that's me) is about to turn.

In the 13 years since I first entered radio, the lady at our house has been my severest friend and best critic.

My every mispronunciation brought patient admonition. Each "er," "ah," and "uh" was duly noted and called to my attention. No fluff in those millions of words went unnoticed.

But at long last the shoe is on the other foot, and I mean to make the most of it.

Tonight at 6:30, WWDC's Willis Conover will interview my wife on the subject of the National Symphony Fund Drive. And guess who is going to be just outside the studio, with his nose pressed up against the glass window, pencil and pad poised to make note of any mistakes?

And if she gets stubborn and doesn't make any, I'm not going to speak to her for the rest of the evening. Unless, of course, I get hungry before bedtime and have to ask her to fix a little snack.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Short-haired, housebroken mongrel about 9 months old; has had shots. Weighs 30 pounds, needs fenced yard." (Emerson 7590.)

"Two healthy 4-month-old kittens, completely housebroken." (Woodley 1156 after 6:30 p.m.)

"Beautifully marked, affectionate 7-month-old tiger cat." (Falls Church 1539.)

"Pink, part-Persian kittens. One sits up and 'boxes' at 6 weeks; needs a trainer." (Axminster 7431.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Alfred E. Bowers, 625 Ray dr., Silver Spring, Md.: I'm glad to hear that the kittens drew so many calls. Several people have told me that they were always "too late" when they called in the morning, so they got hold of a copy of our "bulldog" edition which rolls at 8:30 the night before, and finally got the pet they wanted.

SHAGGY DRUNK STORY

The current issue of the phone company's magazine, "The Transmitter," includes a bright variation of the drunk-and-the-elevator-shaft story.

This drunk pushed the button and then stepped into the empty shaft, falling three stories into the basement.

Brushing himself off with great dignity, he looked up to the open door and shouted:

"You scoundrel; I said UP."

69th Year Helping Build Greater Washington

Spring Valley

. . . Section of Washington bounded on the East by American University, the North by Massachusetts Avenue, West by Dalecarlia Reservoir, South by Loughboro Road.

The principles of community planning which had proved so successful in the neighborhood community of Wesley Heights were applied to Spring Valley. Model homes with an affinity of architectural design were created, landscaping completed, and every improvement installed before Spring Valley was opened for public purchase in 1928.

The homes of many beautiful communities in Washington, nearby Maryland and Virginia have their financial foundations in the Washington Permanent Building Association. Our many years' service has made home-ownership easier for thousands. Visit, phone or write us.

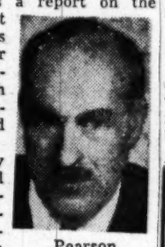
FTC Report on du Pont Revealed

By Drew Pearson

Congressman Manny Celler of New York is keeping it secret so far, but his monopoly investigating committee has a report on the giant du Pont combine and its control over American industry which every businessman should read.



Pearson

Prepared by the Federal Trade Commission, the super-secret document shows how du Pont, General Motors, U. S. Rubber and the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., have teamed up to form the most potent industrial combine this country has ever known.

This sprawling dynasty has become a government unto itself, bossed by the Delaware du Ponts whose chemical company alone nets 120 million dollars annual profits after taxes. The du Pont family, the FTC report shows, controls and shares in the income of other companies with assets amounting to close to 3 billion dollars and net profits (after taxes) of well over 300 million dollars a year.

Here are some highlights from the FTC report:

The du Pont investment in General Motors stock, worth more than 500 million dollars at current market prices, was purchased for only about 47 million dollars. Yet betwen 1918 and 1947 the du Ponts received over 670 million dollars in dividends from this stock.

Of 44 million outstanding shares of General Motors common stock, about 23 percent—or 10 million shares—are owned by the duPonts. The remaining 34 million shares are held by more than 400,000 individual stockholders. Yet du Pont controls GM policies and the selection of its directors, a number of whom have doubled as du Pont directors for years.

Meantime, the du Ponts have bought heavily into U. S. Rubber, until today they own, either directly or through personal holding companies and trusts, about 300,000 shares—or 17 percent—of the common stock.

As a result, the FTC report shows, du Pont has almost as great avoice over U. S. Rubber policies and the selection of its officers as it exercises over General Motors.

Interlocking Trade

The close-knit relationships between the four firms has been further strengthened by trade covenants which discriminated against outside companies competing for business with any of the four, FTC records show. For instance, since 1917, du Pont has purchased practically all of its cars and trucks from General Motors. In return, GM purchases most of its fabrics, paints, varnishes and lacquers from du Pont.

The FTC report also reveals that all four companies—du Pont, GM, U. S. Rubber and Libbey-Owens-Ford—have first call on each other's products under secret trade covenants.

Turns Tables

Reporter Bob Byrnes of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant, was attending a recent press conference with Atomic Energy Commissioner Sumner Pike. On question after question, Pike had refused comment. Finally he said a few words on atomic reactors, and wound up asking Byrnes:

"That's what you would do, wouldn't you?"

"I am sorry, commissioner," Byrnes shot back, paraphrasing Pike, "but I can't answer that question."

Government Business

The staid old National Republican Club of New York was thrown into an uproar recently over a resolution on party policy.

At the request of GOP National Chairman Guy Gabrielson, the members of the silk-stocking club assembled to write a resolution offered by Cornelius Wickersham, jr. It read:

"Resolved, that the United States Government should not in any way compete with private industry."

This was greeted with enthusiasm and applause—until Henry van Veen, a comaratively young man in this council of elders, bounced up and asked:

"Does that mean the Government must get out of housing, and out of TVA? Does that mean rural electrification must be abandoned?"

There was an answering shout of "yes," followed by a storm of debate. But when the votes were counted Wickersham's resolution against Government in business was defeated.
